Trotsky says that woman's lot, in Russia, is happier than anywhere else on earth. That self-approving note will be questioned, since, no matter what laws may say, a woman's lot depends on the sort of husband she draws in the marriage lottery.

Beyond question, however, women in Russia, as elsewhere, are better off than they were. Read histories of Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great the chapters on woman and marriage, and you learn that there was room for improvement.

On his wedding night the Russian husband's first present was a whip. This he fastened in his belt, saying to the bride, "I hope I shall never need it." When the bride and bridegroom retired she pulled off his boots and he struck her across the shoulders with the whip gently to prove his authority. He was less gentle later.

Ancient religious instruction, imported into Russia from the east, gave exact directions for wife-beating and taught men to suspect and despise women. "What is woman? A net to tempt men. With her clear face and her high set eyes she works spells. What is a woman? A viper's nest."

The Russian was warned to keep his wife shut in. "She sits behind 27 locks. She sits locked in with 27 keys, so that bold comrades may not see her."

Bold comrades saw her occasionally, however, and rather intimately, in bits of 27 locks, you may also learn from Walszewski.

But old Russia had no monopoly of contempt for women. The Christian church through the black middle ages preached contempt for women, as vile creatures, used by Satan to tempt man to destruction.

Even Solomon, wisest of the seven wise men, said, "The wise man thanks the gods daily for having made him a Greek and not a barbarian, a man and not a beast, a male and not a female."

In Turkey, where the harem is officially abolished, and men offered to get along with one wife, some of the Turks take the change with bitterness. One old Turk killed himself and his many wives, rather than change from an oriental harem to a modern home.

A whitewashing report covers up responsibility for the many killings in that needless Shenandoah disaster.

It is stated that Commander Lansdowne is "exonerated." He needs no exoneration. But the people that have followed the case would like to know which of the swivel chair warriors in Washington was responsible for Lansdowne's death.

The report is correct in its statement that Lansdowne was consulted about the trip. But it overlooks the fact that his advice and protests were ignored.

Last June, he told this writer, who has frequently published the fact, that such a trip as the one on which he was killed would probably end disastrously.

Interurban Car Service Crippled By Power Breaks

Interurban car service between East Liverpool and Steubenville was crippled this morning due to breaks in the power lines in the vicinity of Stratton, Jefferson county.

The first break occurred at 7:30 o'clock, when the power was off for about a minute. There was another break at 9 o'clock.

The Steubenville district was more seriously affected by the break than East Liverpool. Linemen were started from the local office to trace the trouble when the first suspension occurred, but at noon had not reported the cause.

ROBERT B. SCOTT HUNT ENDS IN PRISON CELL

Suspected Slayer is Believed in San Quentin.

AWAITS PAROLE

Charged With Killing Chicago Drug Clerk in Hold-up.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—One of the most feverish manhunt of recent years was at an end today as identification of "John Redding," serving a robbery sentence in San Quentin prison in California and on the eve of being paroled, as Robert B. Scott is proved correct.

For two years Scott has been assiduously sought on a charge of the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, during a hold-up—the same charge that three times brought his brother, Russell, to the edge of the gallows and eventually landed him in Chester asylum for the criminal insane at Menard, Ill., with hanging as his fate if he ever is found sane again.

During half of those two years Russell Scott, his devoted wife, his aged father and mother, vainly broadcast through every available method of publicity a plea that Robert surrender and give his brother a chance to escape the rope by taking upon himself the blame for firing the shot that killed young Maurer.

It was a "cheap" crime in the first place—the killing of a holdup victim who chanced to anger two bandits—but the aftermath stirred a continent.

Russell Scott, arrested within a day, calmly confessed that the killing was the climax of a string of store holdups in which he and his brother had taken part. About the only interest

Secretary Emmett Gaston Reports Unpaid Bills Amounting to $7,000, With Only $1,600 in Bank.

ANOTHER $38,000 DEFICIT LOOMS

D. F. White Re-elected President, While F. T. Weaver is Again Chosen Vice-president at Re-Organization Meeting.

Approximately $30,000 "in the hole," the East Liverpool district public schools reopened yesterday for the spring term.

The financial embarrassment was revealed at last night's board of education meeting, when it was admitted the 1925 funds were exhausted on December 1.

Fear Large Deficit.
In order to meet the December payroll of teachers and janitors, the board borrowed $25,000 last month, which comes out of the funds allotted for 1926. Of this money there is a balance of about $1,600 in the bank, with unpaid bills estimated at $7,000.

To make matters worse, Emmett Gaston, secretary-treasurer, warned the board that an additional $38,000 deficit is expected at the end of 1926. The estimated expense of the schools during the calendar year are $346,000. With a shrinkage of between 10 and 12 per cent in tax collections, there is little likelihood that more than $308,000 shall be forthcoming from the county. If these fears are fulfilled the schools will face a shortage of $55,000 or $70,000 before the end of the year.

Cause of Shortage.
The shortage last year is said to have been due to the shrinkage in tax collections. The millage, according to county board officials, is fixed by the school tax commission on the basis that all taxes are paid, but the commission failed to take into consideration delinquency.

The 1925 school levy was 8.71 mills, which netted the local schools about $290,000, as compared to the estimated requirements of about $315,000. Being the reimbursement would mean increased revenue, the board last fall re-established domestic science, manual training and mechanical drawing courses in the high school, organized part-time and ceramic schools, which increased the operating expenses for 1925 to about $346,000.

The levy for 1926 is 9.15 mills, which, it is claimed, will net the required $346,000 if all taxes are paid, but deduction of the usual 10 per cent delinquency means not more than $308,000 or $310,000.

OHIO RAILROAD RATE WAR NEAR

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—Ohio railroads, apparently, are on the eve of a rate war.

This belief was voiced here today by state officials. They predicted that, if the anticipated slashing of freight rates develops, the results will, in all probability, include a lowering of the cost of living for Ohioans to some extent, at least.

Joint application was filed today with the state utilities commission by the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Lorain & West Virginia Railway companies, for permission to put into effect upon one day's notice, a schedule of reduced freight rates on pig iron shipments. The proposed reductions range from 17 to 20 cents per ton.

Other major causes for arrest were: Suspicious persons, 44; driving automobile while intoxicated, 30; gambling, 23; disorderly conduct, 57; trespassing, 19; assault, 16; larceny, 21; fighting, 31; non-support, 13; begging, 12; drunk and using profane language, 7; delinquency, 7; operating automobile without consent of owner, 8; permitting gambling, 7; carrying concealed weapons, 8.

There was one arrest upon a murder charge, while two others were taken into custody for manslaughter in connection with traffic fatalities.

Of the 1,283 persons facing the mayor during the year, 1,040 were residents of East Liverpool, while the remaining 243 came from outside the city.

EVELYN NESBIT THAW DRINKS LYSOL, MAY DIE; SON ARRESTED

"Broadway Butterfly" Found Unconscious in Chicago.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Boy Held When he Refuses to Answer Questions.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, "Broadway butterfly," divorced wife of Harry Thaw, attempted to reach the end of her troubled career here this morning.

She was found unconscious in her apartment at 55 East Walton place after she had drunk eight ounces of lysol.

Her 17-year-old son, Russell Thaw, was taken into custody by police when he point-blank refused to answer questions regarding the attempted suicide of his mother. He and a maiden were working over her frantically when police arrived.

She was taken to the Ashland Boulevard hospital, where at 8 o'clock this morning her chances for recovery were said to be exceedingly slim.

Found by Her Son.
Miss Nesbit has been dancing here at the Moulin Rouge.

Miss Nesbit had just completed her engagement at the cabaret and was to leave tomorrow for the east and Florida.

Early inquiries gave no indication of the cause for this latest attempt of the Broadway belle of 20 years ago to end her life. At the hospital it was said her condition is so critical that it is impossible to question her.

Miss Nesbit was found at 5 o'clock this morning by her son when he and the maid were attracted by groans from her room.

She lay in her night clothing, moaning and unable to speak.

Recovery Doubtful.
Her personal physician, Dr. E. Thomas Brand, was summoned and she was taken at once to the Asland Boulevard hospital run by Dr. Amante

$50,000 FUND IS PLACED IN HANDS OF FIVE CITIZENS HERE

R. M. Brookes Chosen Chairman; W. S. Foulks, Secretary

COURT'S ACTION

J. S. Hilbert, D. M. Ogilvie and W. H. Vodrey Other Members.

In compliance with the recent decision of the appellate court of the Ninth judicial district, Common Pleas Judge James G. Moore at Lisbon, yesterday afternoon announced the appointment of five trustees in whose hands the $50,000 balance in the East Liverpool War Chest shall be placed. Trustees to Furnish Bond.

The committee, which was named upon recommendation of the various interests involved in the litigation, includes Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes, a World War veteran, who is chairman; Attorney William S. Foulks, past commander and at present adjutant of East Liverpool Post No. 4, American Legion, chosen secretary; James S. Hilbert, real estate and fire insurance dealer and election board official, treasurer; W. H. Vodrey, attorney-at-law, and D. M. Ogilvie, dry goods merchant.

Bond for $10,000 each of the board was placed at $10,000, while that of Foulks as secretary at $5,000. The other members of the board will post $1,000 bond each.

The balance in the War Chest, much of which is invested in government bonds, is in the hands of W. E. Dunlap, cashier of the First National bank, and Joseph Betz, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who were made custodians of the fund by a court order pending settlement of the controversy. The money is to be turned over to the permanent board of trustees as soon as the bonds of the trustees are filed.

Two-Year Court Fight.
Disposition of the War Chest balance found its way into the county courts about two years ago, after the War Chest executive board voted to divide the money between the East Liverpool chapter of the American Red Cross for relief work and the City hospital as the nucleus for a building fund.

Local posts of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars were granted injunctions against this.

TWO MILL MEN GAS VICTIMS

Bodies Found in Niles Home When Doors are Battered.

NILES, O., Jan. 5.—Battering their way through a kitchen door early this morning, at 21 Cedar street, police discovered the bodies of two men, L. J. Ayers, of Canonsburg, Pa., and S. E. Johnson, of Cuyahoga Falls, his father-in-law. They were victims of monoxide gas poison and had been dead apparently for 12 days. They had not been seen since they entered the house on December 23.

They came here to work in the plant of the Empire Steel company. Unloading their furniture they started two gas stoves, turning the gas on full, and went to bed.

Neighbors thought the men had returned to their families but became alarmed when the weather moderated and the stoves were still going full blast.

WEIRTON STEEL LETS CONTRACT

Pittsburgh Company is to Build 49 New Coke Ovens.

The Weirton Steel company, as part of its $15,000,000 improvement program yesterday awarded a $2,250,000 contract to the Koppers company of Pittsburgh for the construction of a battery of 49 by-product coke ovens.

These ovens will be added to the battery of 37 ovens now in use at the plant, giving the company a total of 86 ovens. Construction of the new battery, which will be of the Becker type, will start immediately and be completed in about eight months.

When the full 86 ovens are in operation, the company will produce approximately 1,700 tons of furnace coke per day from 2,500 tons of coal. At the present time coal consumption in the by-product plant is 1,600 tons from which 700 tons of furnace coke are produced daily. This coke is used in the making of pig iron in the blast furnaces.

The new battery of ovens will include apparatus for the recovery of by-products, and these by-products will be sold. This is in conformity with the latest practice in use by by-product plants.

The nut coke which is produced at the ovens is now being sold for domestic use. During the recent demand for coke of this size for consumption in the East, due to the scarcity of anthracite, the steel company sold a large quantity there, but more recently its outlet has been in the Middle West, where it has a more favorable freight rate. On domestic business, it finds it difficult to compete with the Connellsville product, since the Weirton freight rate is 60 cents per ton more than Connellsville's east.

The company expects to let the contract for the new blast furnace, another item in the big development program, within a week or 10 days, it is said. The excavation work of this blast furnace, which was done by the steel company, has been completed and work on the furnace also will start immediately after the award of the contract.

Weirton Steel is still working on the excavation for the three new open hearths and the eight sheet mills, which will also be constructed early this year. Work on the new dock, which is being done by a local company, is said to be progressing satisfactorily. This improvement will be completed early in the summer.

Royal Tokio Palace To be Filmed and Shown to Natives

TOKIO—For the first time in history the interior of the imperial palace in Tokio, the official home of the Japanese emperor, is to be filmed and shown to the public. Alberto paries of students from schools throughout the country have, on rare occasions, been permitted to visit certain portions of the palace. The general public, however, has been barred and has no idea of the emperor's surroundings in which their ruler lives. The Imperial Household department has decided that widespread knowledge of the imperial environment will intensify the national reverence toward the Throne and has selected the moving picture film as the best method of disseminating this knowledge.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GUY WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

FORTY.

The train moved slowly through long lines of freight cars, behind which, towering through the smoke was an assembly of buildings labeled in large white letters, National Axle and Bearing company, and in smaller ones, Central City, Chicago, New York, San Francisco, New Orleans. It emerged into the open again, and a city built upon a hillside was revealed.

"This, Therese," said the tall woman in draw-room "D" of the last car, "is Central City."

Mrs. Mary Farr Harwood's French maid looked out of the window.

"Oui, Ville de la madame!"

"Larger perhaps, than you thought it would be?"

"Oui, madame."

The first Mrs. Harwood had been beautiful, and was stately and majestic in appearance. Endowed by nature with strong powers and violent passions, unfortunately she never had learned to employ the one, and to conceal, if not to moderate the other.

In the days when Mrs. Harwood was the reigning hostess of Central City, she was a severe and strict observer of the external forms; her hospitality was splendid, even to ostentation; her address and manners were grave, dignified, and severely regulated by the rules of etiquette.

And yet, with all these qualities to excite respect, she was seldom mentioned in the terms of approval and affection. Self-interest seemed too obviously the motive of all her actions; and when this was the case, sharp-judging and malignant women are not easily imposed on by outward show.

Her feelings now, as she saw the ancient union station looming around the curved track, were confused. She had gone away from Central City a broken woman, seeking only to forget. Now after wandering afar amidst new and enervating vistas, she was back, still unable to forget, but not disturbed so much by her memories.

The train stopped with a jerk. Mrs. Harwood wondered who would be waiting for her in the station. She bent down in the aisle and tried to see the faces behind the guard-fence. Possibly even Noble. No! What was she thinking of! Ridiculous! Her eyes clouded. Those seconds the passengers were held up while the porter was depositing the hand-luggage upon the platform, were irritatingly long.

At last she faced the open air and saw loved ones. Lillah and Marion. They burst past the guard and ran to meet her. There were tears in her eyes when she stood back a minute later, having kissed both of them with all the feeling of a disturbed soul.

"How awfully well you are looking!" Lillah exclaimed.

"Yes, mother, you look years younger," Marion agreed. She noted her mother's bobbed hair and ultra attire.

"Gee, you certainly got fixed up in Paris." It only she had known the hours and hours her mother had spent with hair-dressers, dressmakers, milliners and similar specialists.

"Mother, I'm expecting you to be my guest for a while," Lillah explained, as they walked along, the maid following them uncertainly. "You didn't write and say what your plans were and I—"

"I shall probably take a house," her mother answered. She was uncomfortable in the face of the stares of throngs in the station. It apparently was generally known that Mrs. Noble Harwood the first was returning to Central City.

Marion had not thought it incongruous for her to borrow the Harwood limousine for the occasion, and so the trip to the Lyons home was made in one of Noble's cars, with the maid in front with Henry and mother and daughters behind.

"How is little Mary?" the elder one asked, relieving a silence.

"Just fine, and just dying to see Grandma Harwood. All of her grandparents are 'tramped'."

"How does Central City look to you now, mother?" Marion asked.

"Much the same, much the same."

"Awful isn't it, after Paris and London and Rome?"

"The best city is where a mother's children are," was the quiet response, given as she pressed them with the arms she had about their shoulders. Lillah's eyes were wet; Marion stared uncomfortably out of the window.

"How is your father?"

Lillah, a little shocked because her mother had asked the question, murmured, "Oh, he's all right."

"Is he in the city?"

"Yes, he is busy preparing for the ball that is to be Marion's coming-out affair."

Mrs. Harwood regarded her youngest daughter, "Yes, my baby is growing up."

Marion was disturbed and puzzled. Her mother had never been like this before. The mother of old had not been interested in her children and had wasted few soft words upon them.

"I want you to come, mother, please," Marion said, taking the home-comer's hand. Their eyes met.

"Father is sending you an invitation."

"Perhaps I shall." What suppressed agony there was in her voice!

"You have a very pretty maid, mother," Lillah observed, clutching at the first thing she could think of to talk about.

"Yes. She used to be maid-in-waiting to the Countess de Vagrac. Her husband was killed in the war. Perfect in every particular. I simply couldn't do without her. . . . Is Lillah still—"

"She's Laurel's maid now."

Lillah tried to get her sister's eye; they must, she wanted to flash, avoid referring to their father.

"I am very anxious to meet Laurel," said Mrs. Harwood calmly, "and I hope I shall have an early opportunity."

The two girls glanced at each other apprehensively. Was there something ominous in their mother's words?

(To be continued.)

In the next installment: Noble decides he wants to see his first wife.

NOTED SECESSION DOCUMENT FOUND

Hunted Ordinance Turns Up in Sandusky, Ohio.

Sandusky, Ohio.—South Carolina's ordinance of secession, missing almost from the day of its adoption on December 20, 1860, came to light here.

It is in the temporary possession of Common Pleas Judge William L. Flesinger, who refuses to discuss it except to say that it has been an heirloom in a Sandusky family for some years and that, for the time being at least, he can only admit that he has it.

It has become known here however, that Congressman James T. Begg of this city investigated at Washington and reported that the museums there told him the document now in Judge Flesinger's hands had been long sought but never found.

The congressional library, Begg said, has made repeated requests for the loan or purchase of the ordinance or a photograph copy of it.

After Lincoln was elected the South Carolina legislature called a special session to vote upon secession. The meeting was held in Columbia, S. C., December 17, 1860, but adjourned to Charleston because of a smallpox epidemic in Columbia.

At Charleston the ordinance, declaring "that the union subsisting between South Carolina and other states under the name of the United States of America is hereby dissolved," was framed, approved and signed.

Neatly hand-lettered in one corner of the document is a statement to the effect that it was found in the house of Doctor Lamb, secretary of state, along with other documents by federal officers on March 3, 1865.

The document, which has been referred to as "the cause of the war of the rebellion," is in a remarkably good state of preservation.

That some of the signers were nervous when they signed is evidenced by scrutiny of the approximately 200 signatures on the ordinance.

New Waterway Law.

GULFPORT, Miss., Jan. 5.—Enormous wealth is expected to be added to the value of southern land and industries through the passage of waterway legislation at the present session of congress, according to United States Senator Edwin S. Broussard, of Louisiana, in an address here.

The fine Porto Rican embroidery which is so popular in the United States is done almost entirely by women and children working at home, the industry being fostered by the church and charitable associations.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1926.

The Presidential Hand

President Coolidge shook hands with 3,130 guests at the White House New Year's reception, in observance of the good old American custom. It is probably worth the trouble, for the proud glow it gives the citizens who grasp the presidential hand, and the tradition of democracy that it continues. But it usually leaves the master of the White House with his arm in a sling.

Anyone who thinks that is not a fearsome ordeal should try shaking hands with some friend three or four thousand times in rapid succession. True, there is a technique which eases the strain somewhat. The public man soon learns that it is fatal to let the other fellow get the drop on him, so to speak. So he takes the aggressive, especially with husky males, and gets a firm clinch on the visitor's hand before the visitor can grip his. But while that procedure saves the host's hand from being squeezed to a pulp, it is hard on his contracting muscles.

Yet it must be endured. There is no satisfactory substitute. Rubbing noses in Chinese fashion might be even worse. Imagine the state of President Coolidge's nose after 3,130 rubbings.

A ruler in ancient times was chosen mainly for his strong right arm. We haven't changed much. Shaking hands is friendlier than wielding a battle-axe or sword, but no easier. The boy who aspires to be president should start developing his right arm and hand.

Traveling Through The Ether

Half of the Einstein theory is said to be knocked out by experimental work done by an American scientist, Prof. Dayton C. Miller, of Case School of Applied Science, who has been awarded a $1,000 for his contribution to science.

Einstein based his theorizing on the original experiments of this scientist made 20 years ago with Prof. Norley, of Western Reserve university, which failed to show any "drift" of the ether. His latest observations, made with better equipment, prove conclusively, he says, that there is an ether drift, and shows its extent. This is big news to thinking men.

The main fact proved by Prof. Miller is simply this, which anyone can understand:

The "ether of space" exists, in spite of attempts made to disprove it in recent years. There is some such mysterious substance as philosophers and scientists have long assumed, which fills all space, pervades the whole universe, in which all material things float and move, and which is the carrier of light, electricity and other vibratory forces.

But there a modification of the theory. It used to be said that, if the ether existed, it was "perfectly elastic," so that all moving things passed through it without friction, leaving the ether itself undisturbed. Dr. Miller finds that the ether in its motion through space, and presumably all other material things, drag the ether with them to some extent, as a wire screen sweeping through water drags some of the water.

He proves this by the way our earth's motion through space bends from their straight course light waves from the sun or stars and hastens or retards them according to their direction.

Many conclusions can be drawn, of which these are as interesting as any:

The movement of our solar system through space is far greater than anyone has supposed. The sun has a speed of 12 miles a second with relation to the rest of our universe, but the whole universe itself is moving 120 miles a second.

Whither is it moving, and when will it arrive? Nobody knows that. Will anyone ever know?

Inflated Credit

The annual report of the secretary of the treasury tells the public that "most of the factors underlying the present business situation are apparently sound and warrant optimism for the future." But this assurance is coupled with a warning.

Secretary Mellon refers rather doubtfully to the "tendency for the consuming public to buy every conceivable commodity on time" and hopes that "the speculative tendency in real estate may not proceed to the point of undermining the spirit of caution in business."

These hints are timely. The first particularly deserves attention.

Credit is a mighty valuable and useful institution—so much so that it is a dangerous thing to abuse. It is probably better, on the whole, to do business on a credit basis than a cash basis, because so much more business can be done that way—more goods made and sold and more people kept profitably busy. But there are limits to the usefulness of credit.

Over-inflation of credit among our customers generally, in retail buying as well as in business operation, making very good times for a while, might end suddenly and unexpectedly in bad times, with everybody in the whole.

Convicts nowadays come home for the holidays like college boys. But they don't go back.

Women, like automobiles, come out in yearly models. Usually it's an improvement, too.

Delaware is buying Kansas rabbits, alive, to turn loose for hunters. Why not let the hunters move to a rabbit state?

Days are growing longer. Get out and save the daylight.

Incident of The Holidays

By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Many hotels have enormous suites rented by the year but seldom occupied. Rich men maintain them merely as a convenience when town houses are being renovated or for brief stop-overs between Europe and Florida.

Millionaires in other cities often have reservations by the year so they will not face annoyance of a crowded city upon occasional visits. Some are even manned by personal servants who see their employers at rare intervals but must be on the job constantly.

Two South Americans have had elaborate apartments at uptown hotels for more than three years. One has been used for a ten-day period during that time. This rather astounding extravagance is said to total a revenue of more than a million a year for big hotels.

In a new hotel to be built it is said one seven-room apartment has been leased for 10 years to a very rich widow who has a big town mansion and spends the greater portion of her time abroad. A private elevator to her suite is to be installed. She wants it for private functions.

Col. Edward Green, Hetty's son, keeps eight rooms at the Waldorf for incidental use. Flo Ziegfeld has an apartment at the Ritz. Also town apartment and country place. Then there are hundreds who keep apartments in hotels for convenience during the opera.

As a rule these renters must pay a higher rate than the usual tariff due to the loss the dining rooms suffer from lack of patronage. As a general thing the revenue from food for the steady occupant is about one-third of the amount of the rent. Thus hotels desire steady eating patrons.

The tug of war between Florida and California for New York winter patronage has resulted in many amusing yarns. There is one of the Floridian and Californian going to a convention in a Florida hotel. They had argued about the respective size and virtues of their states all the way. Their beds when they arrived were adjoining. The Floridian secured a large turtle and placed it in his neighbor's bed. When the latter retired his foot touched the turtle. He leaped out, threw back the sheet and yelled: "What in the world is that?"

"One of our Florida bed-bugs," said the Californian laconically.

The Californian squeaked at it closely again and remarked: "Little son-of-a-gun ain't he?"

Jim Corbett was turning his auto around a Broadway corner to draw up at the Lambs. He forgot to signal traffic back of him and a taxi brushed his car. When Corbett stopped in front of the club, the taxi driver leaned out to bawl him out and recognizing the puglist said with a snort of disgust: "Hell I thought you knew how to use your hands."

Then there is the story of the ultra-sophisticated New Yorker, Gene Buck, who got caught in the midst of a traffic jam and after jockeying about heard a taxi driver sing out: "How do you like the city, Bub?"

Rea Irvin, the artist, had an Airdale torn in battle. He took him to a veterinary two miles away for repairs. Again the dog was badly used up in a fight but this time he appeared at the doctor's office unaccompanied and was properly bandaged. The third time the veterinary was out but when he returned the dog was lifeless on his step with a deep gash in his throat. Those who do not know dogs may doubt this. Those who do will merely attribute it to the average intelligence of the ordinary dog.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

America—The Magnet

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 5.—Mr. Slitherwaite, of the United States, may point with pride or view with alarm, according to his views on isolation—once he takes a look around him to see how this country is dealing with the rest of the planet. He would find in that survey an interesting phenomenon, unparalleled in history, save, perhaps, in a view of Babylon, or Nineveh, or Rome, in their palmyest days. For, to use the language of Mr. Sinclair Lewis, he would find "that over night, without even ourselves perceiving it, we are changing from the world's dusty wheatfield to the world's hectic but incomparably fascinating capital." To paraphrase the thought: America is on the verge of absorbing the world.

The American magnet is an instrument of great potency. From the crannies and the broad valleys of civilization the particles of the world's life are yielding to its attraction. Where Babylon and Nineveh and Rome reached out and brought the world to their shrines, America is reaching out at ease, and the world is reaching out to touch her. And Mr. Slitherwaite, were he of analytical mind, would find ample evidence of this in his inspection.

For this inspection would include the development of America during the past six years. He would see the Metropolitan Museum and he would see such names as Michael Arlen, M. Dantchenko, George Bernard Shaw, J. Pierpont Morgan, H. R. H. Edward prince of Wales, Mundein and Hays, Bab, the Passion Players, Noel Coward, Countess Karolyi, the European Debt Commission, M. Caillaux, Bolshevism, Owen D. Young and Charles G. Dawes, the Washington Conference, General Pershing, Rudolph Valentino, and Paavo Nurmi.

In this list he would discover the tremendous attraction of America. He would find that she has drawn to her the attention of the world, and that almost every phase of human endeavor and thought is looking to her. He would find that the arts are being irresistibly attracted, that religion is concentrating on the American field, that politics, finance, economics, sociology, international relations, sports—everything under the sun—is becoming America's province.

Europe comes to her for money; artists come to her to exploit their works; religion pays attention to her tremendous field; she is the greatest market for sports in the world; she is sought in international conferences; and her South American sister republics look to her to settle their disputes.

Indeed, so pronounced is the trend toward America that it led a British statesman to cry out against it not long ago, likening America to a great cesspool of wealth which is sucking the art and culture of the world into its depths.

The Weakest Nation

And wealth, it is true, has the major role in this trend. America today is the world's wealthiest nation. According to estimates given recently her aggregate capital is in the neighborhood of three hundred billions, while the second in line—Great Britain—can muster but a little over a hundred billion as her share.

So the trend is natural, where the money is, everything goes. Where money is there is prosperity and room for new ideas, new artistic development.

But behind American money is American energy and the genius for adapting things to the best advantage. The American has always been an acquirer. From the beginning of the nation he has been looking out for new things. He bought Louisiana from the French; from Russia he purchased Alaska; from Spain he bought the new booming Florida; and from Denmark he got the Virgin Islands. So striking is this tendency that it led a rather facetious observer to remark recently that the question of today is: "How much of England—indeed of Europe, Asia, and Africa—can the United States absorb?"

The Metropolitan Museum in New York is a typical instance. It does not cover the United States, of course, but it is an epitome of America's program of acquisition. There the interested will find that Abbeville, in France, has not yielded a mere count of mail, but an armorer's forge, complete with anvil and anvil. Switzerland has furnished a paneled parlor, with a tiled stove, 300 years old.

The Morgan room is filled with souvenirs and snuff boxes of royal France and if a scion of the glorious Bourbons were suddenly to appear he would probably feel more at home than he did among his own countrymen in July 1789.

Even old Egypt has come and laid her treasures at the feet of the Goddess of Liberty. The body of ancient Parnab, embalmed several thousand years ago, has been dug up, the tomb taken apart and packed for shipment, like so much freight, on a steamship and brought to New York, where it has been put together and on exhibition for American eyes.

Art Treasures Accumulate

And so it is with almost everything the other hemisphere possesses. If America acquires a hankering for an art treasure it is certain that one of her millionaires will have it and place it in some American art gallery as a memorial to himself.

There are countless other instances. M. Dantchenko deserted the Moscow theater—if only temporarily—to give New York a treat. Michael Arlen brought over his Storm, Mayfair, These Charming People, and The Romantic Lady to visit with Americans. Rudolph Valentino deserted his native Italy to charm America. Noel Coward came over from London to try his sex plays on New York and George Bernard Shaw has been crowding the American stage with his works. The Bolsheviks sent representatives to convert a prosperous bourgeoisie into a miserable proletariat, and Countess Karolyi knocked at the door in the interest of a certain Hungarian faction.

In more serious vein: Europe has been asking for money in one breath and conferring on how to pay past debts in another. Peru and Chile have asked America to settle their dispute. Dawes and Young fashioned a plan for the economic rehabilitation of Europe. The Prince of Wales displayed extreme enthusiasm over American civilization. Mundein and Hays were made cardinals with the eyes of the world upon them.

America is attracting the world to her. All roads used to lead to Rome; now they lead to America.

American automobiles are used to overcome the great distances on the vast plains of Australia.

John French Says Thacher's Did It

Florida Man Declares Recovery From Bad Case of Stomach Trouble Is Due Entirely to Celebrated Liver and Blood Syrup.

"If anybody has reason to feel grateful for Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup, I am certainly that man," declared John E. French, a well-known resident of Hawkes Park, Fla. "It has practically made a new man of me."

"Ten years ago my health gave way and I got in a badly run-down condition. My stomach was all out of order and most everything I ate would sour and cause my stomach to burn like fire. I would belch up fluid that was hot as pepper and bitter as gall, and many a time I was bloated till I was tight as a drum."

"I was badly constipated, too, and suffered constantly with dull, heavy headaches, and at times would have awful pains through my body, clear to my back."

"Finally, I got some of Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup, and before I had finished my second bottle I had gotten rid of all those troubles. Since then I have always kept this medicine in my home and it has been a stand-by with the whole family—never fails to do the work."

"I've seen Dr. Thacher's great prescription do wonders for other people, too. Why, about four years ago I ran across an old friend who has all run down and in mighty bad shape. He had been doctoring a long time but didn't get any better. I got him to take Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup and two months later I got a letter from his wife saying he was improving fast, and after taking only two bottles was almost well. The last I heard from him he was getting along fine."

Mr. French, like thousands of others, found that his stomach trouble quickly yielded to the strengthening invigorating efforts of Dr. Thacher's Great Liver and Blood Syrup. Anyone can easily obtain this celebrated prescription and if it does not benefit him his money will be refunded.

It is sold in East Liverpool by Carahan Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

Vapors stop Colds

VAPORS reach a cold directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks Vapo-Rub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin (like a poultice or plaster) "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

Good Leather, Too

ANOTHER characteristic feature of Cantilever Shoes which has much to do with their unusual comfort and remarkable durability is one which we seldom have space to mention.

Namely, the high quality of leather used in making them.

But without this they would be neither so comfortable nor so durably smart and even handsome after months of wear.

Good leather without Cantilever constructional features would not give Cantilever comfort.

But good leather and Cantilever Design make an almost perfect combination. We know you will enjoy wearing the

Cantilever Shoe

It is so good in quality, and so pleasing in comfort, and so refined in style. Come and try on a pair and see if you do not like the Cantilever better than any shoe you have ever walked in.

OHIO ASSEMBLY WILL CONVENE ON JANUARY 15
Leaders Perfect Plans for One-day Special Session.

DRAFT PROGRAM
Agreement Sought on Financial Relief for Districts.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 4. — Legislative leaders today are perfecting plans for the one-day special session of the Ohio legislature to be held here starting at 9 a. m. January 15. Copies of the formal call for the session were being mailed to legislators today.

At a caucus of legislators, to which Democrats as well as Republicans have been invited, scheduled to be held here at 5 p. m. January 14, efforts will be made to reach an agreement to limit the special session to the introduction and passage of an emergency act giving immediate relief to financially distressed municipalities, counties and other local taxing districts.

The financial relief act will be introduced by Representative W. E. Baxter, Allen county. It was drafted by Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, acting speaker and Republican floor leader in the house.

The bill, which is being printed for distribution among legislators and other interested Ohio taxpayers, provides three methods whereby financial relief may be obtained by local taxing districts. One method provides that counties, whose rate limits are absorbed by interest and sinking fund charges, may, by majority petition of the voters, remove tax levies from the limit sufficient to permit the making of levies for operating expenses. This method, it was stated, would eliminate the acute financial situation in Allen county.

Another method would authorize taxing officials to make levies over a period of years in order to liquidate unpaid bills. The third method provides for issuance of refunding notes maturing within the five-year period ending December 31, 1931.

The Baxter bill, according to Taft, would take care of Attorney General Crabbe's request for legislation enabling 16 counties to pay the state approximately $500,000 alleged due for care and maintenance of dependent wards.

A public hearing on the bill is to be held at a joint session of the senate and house tax committees, in the house chamber at 11 a. m., January 8.

Scott Hunt Ends

lent the story was that a few years before Russell Scott, for all his youth, had been a financial wizard in Canada and the promoter of a $30,000,000 project which had fallen through.

Eventually he came before a judge, pleaded guilty to murder and threw himself upon the mercy of the court expecting the usual prison sentence in such cases. Instead, he was sentenced to hang.

A horrified attorney threw himself upon his knees before the bar and, with tears streaming down his face, pleaded that the sentence be set aside, the plea of guilty withdrawn and a trial by a jury granted.

He got it and Scott again was sentenced to death.

Still an every-day criminal case. But the loyalty and devotion of two persons—the fragile little wife whom Scott had deserted and his crippled, grey-haired father—had fired a train of emotions that were to run a long gamut.

Petitions for Commutation.

In Ontario province, Canada, where Scott had been known only as a man of wealth and of a good record, the effort to save him began and spread like wildfire to various parts of the United States. In Canada, benefit entertainments were staged to raise funds to appeal his case. In Detroit, club women interested themselves in his behalf. In other parts of the country, petitions for a commutation were circulated and descended upon Governor Len Small of Illinois in an avalanche.

Although there was only his word for it and the law makes no distinction between the actual slayer and an accomplice, Scott's story that it was his brother who had killed Maurer started a search for Robert that was believed would bring about the desired commutation.

Three times, while all these frenzied efforts in his behalf were being made, Russell Scott was brought within a few hours of the gallows.

Jury Saves Russell Scott.

Three times he escaped it. Twice the governor gave him a reprieve that his case might be reviewed by higher courts; the third time a judge was haled from his bed in the early hours before dawn to halt, by means of a law dim and musty with age and disuse, the execution at almost the very moment it was timed to begin.

That law, dusted off but once before in the half century it had been in existence, provided no alternative but a jury trial of Scott's sanity.

That jury saved him definitely. It found him insane and he went to the asylum, blithely waving his hand at the crowds that besieged the train upon which he departed and sneering openly at the sentimentalities which were being showered upon him.

Since then, interest in him died down and even the search for his brother had become only a matter of police routine, which now threatens to be upset again by the identification of "Redding" as the much wanted man.

Garbage Collector Makes More Money Than Church Pastor

Evangelist Lincicome
Says Church Keeps Her
Workmen Nearer Hunger Point Than Industrial Organizations

Rev. F. Lincicome, evangelist of Gary, Ind., spoke to another large audience last night in the Oakland Free Methodist church where he is conducting a series of meetings.

"The church," he said, "is the richest organization in the world—richer than the Standard Oil company or the United States Steel corporation, yet in spite of her influence she keeps her workmen nearer the hunger point than any industrial organization. A garbage collector makes more money in this country than the average preacher.

"An addition to the church should mean a subtraction from the world. One should not be content in both places. The ideal type of Christianity is the happy blending of righteousness, peace and joy, a rising element of the Holy Spirit.

"Holiness is a trinity and consists of theory, experience and practice. Theoretical holiness has to do with the head. Experimental holiness has to do with the heart and practical holiness has to do with the hand."

Evangelist Lincicome will speak at the noon hour tomorrow in the Laughlin plant, East End.

TODAY

When the order came, he protested, as his wife has said, as the records prove. The records also prove that his protest was overruled, his advice was rejected, with an indorsement to the effect that certain facts were to be held on fixed dates, therefore he must make the trip as scheduled.

That order caused his death, and that of the good men that died with him.

The Shenandoah report is a shameless whitewashing job as everybody expected it would be, disgraced to the navy and to the administration, and that is that.

Cowards that stupidly risked the lives of other men, prove to be the sort of cowards that dodge responsibility.

Dealing with money is a clean, steady, regular business. Someone always needs it and is willing to pay for it. George F. Baker, dean of great American bankers and head of New York's First National bank, announces the profits of more than sixteen million dollars for the year, dividends at the rate of 100 per cent, nice round numbers.

Not so long ago that bank was too poor to join in the clearing house. Now it has resources of five hundred millions. And Mr. Mitchell's bigger bank, the National City bank, has twice as much as the First National. Only a few centuries back, taking interest on money, at no matter what rate, was pronounced a mortal sin by the Christian church everywhere.

Fortunately for the bankers, opinions have changed.

Dr. Dayton C. Miller wins the $1,000 prize of the American Association for the Advancement of Science with his essay on "The Michelson-Morley ether drift experiment." Dr. Miller's experiments at the Mount Wilson observatory will cause Einstein to revise his theories on relativity, so say the scientists.

The average man does not even know what the ether drift is, except that in interstellar space stars have an absolute motion, as regards each other, and a much greater, more rapid movement through the ether.

In fact, the greatest scientist cannot tell you what the ether is, or even prove that it exists, except as an indispensable hypothesis. In science, buff when they deal with infinite men are children playing blindman's space.

England is still much annoyed, justly, because we make such a fuss about the British rubber monopoly. This rich nation should not whine if another makes money. We ought to plant our own rubber trees, or, better, find a substitute for rubber trees. It is bound to come. Why not now?

The strangest story of last year is that of Mrs. Eliza Nushbaum, 58 years old and a grandmother. She confesses that she plotted with four others to kill her husband, older than herself, because she wanted to marry another man.

Mrs. Nushbaum's excuse is that in 44 years of married life her husband's only kind act was that once he bought her some ice cream.

The other man, it seemed, loved her and waited 14 years for the husband to die. They thought that was long enough, so they killed him.

Mr. Hoover's agents in Moscow have discovered letters written by Catherine of Russia to Franklin, Paul Jones and others. They were romantic letters, and Mr. Hoover is not sure that they should be given to a pure-minded prohibition public, especially the letters to Paul Jones.

The censor should read some of Catherine's other letters, and the story of her life, and her plain, straightforward method when she took a fancy to a man. She was very direct.

"What's Your Hurry Company" is Playing At Strand Theatre

East Liverpool theatregoers have a real treat in store for them this week in the musical comedy offering of "What's Your Hurry Company," playing at the Strand theatre.

The company is headed by Bud Brownie, who is a show himself. He is assisted by a half score of other principals and a chorus of girls, who know how to sing and dance.

For the first half of the week the company is presenting a riot of fun, "The Bell Boy." The show is one big laugh from start to finish. Features are Jack Noff, lyric tenor; the Atlantic City trio in a series of vocal selections and a pair of saxophonists, who offer a specialty number.

The chorus is made up of a galaxy of beauty and affords a charming comeliness for the leads. The scenic effects and costumes complete an offering that measures up well with other shows which have been seen here this season.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—A reactionary tone prevailed in the stock market in the early trading today, and industrial stocks, in every main group, were offered in good volume at concessions from Monday's closing price levels.

Considerable interest was displayed in the new class A stock of the National Cash Register company, distributed in the amount of 1,100,000 shares by the Dillon-Read banking house at $50 a share. The first price for the new stock was $52, after which it advanced with pool support to $54 and returned to $52, where trading was quite lively. The stock pays $3 a share annually, and earnings last year are understood to be at the rate of about $7 a share on both classes of stock.

With the exception of a few of the specialty stocks and rails, the trend of the market was downward, though losses seldom exceeded a point or two and offerings were well absorbed. St. Louis Southwestern common continued its forward movement in the railroad list, Savage Arms and International Combustion Engineering in the specialty and General Electric in the high priced industrials. Higher prices were also quoted for Atchafalaya, Continental Can and Woolworth.

Part American Western was the weak spot in the independent oils, with selling due to the reversal of the federal district court's decision in the Elk basin suit between the government and Mr. Doheny. The stock dropped 4 points to 41 1/2 in light trading.

Rongetti, who attained some notoriety by his connection with the Billy McClintock case last year.

"Her recovery is doubtful," said Dr. Rongetti. "There is no chance that the taking of the poison was accidental. No one could drink eight ounces of lysol accidentally."

Gussie Accoe, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Nesbit's maid, and her mistress had been drinking a great deal. "Sunday she went to a party with some friends and came back about 5 o'clock yesterday morning quite intoxicated and with a broken nose," she said.

"She went to bed but didn't stay there, but kept getting up and wandering about the place and calling for beer. She drank eight bottles last night and then became angry because there was no more."

Then she went to the bath room and I followed her. She broke a glass and while I was picking up the pieces she got the bottle of lysol. I didn't think about it being poison until she began to scream.

"Oh, Gussie," she said, "I did it. I took poison. I've killed myself."

"Then I called her doctor after awakening her son, who slept in a nearby room."

Miss Accoe said that when Miss Nesbit left Atlantic City about Thanksgiving time she had just returned from a sanatorium for drug addicts.

"She seemed to be cured," the maid added.

Miss Nesbit, she said, had been talking of return to Florida and seemed worried throughout her stay in Chicago.

Friends Surprised.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 5.—Friends of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw expressed surprise today over the news that she had tried to commit suicide in Chicago. When she left here in late October, at the end of the summer season in the cabarets, she was reported in good health and well-to-do financially.

When she came to Atlantic City to make her home three years ago her health was poor. Finally, she recuperated, and went into the cabaret business where she displayed ability as a singer and as an owner. At various times she managed several cabarets and night clubs. She is also reputed to have made considerable money in the real estate business.

Last summer it was reported that her former husband, Harry K. Thaw, provided for her, and that she had been making arrangements to buy a $40,000 home on the strength of the communication. The story was given publication and Thaw denied not to come.

Just before she went to Chicago she had planned to sing in Florida.

tion, asked that the money be placed in the care of two trustees pending a court decision.

Six months later Judge Carl H. Smith, St. Louisville, presiding in common pleas court, handed down a decision, ordering that the fund be kept intact and the interest be used in the relief of disabled and distressed veterans of the World War. A committee of five, consisting of Attorneys Brooks, Ponks and Vordrey and Messrs. Hilbert and Ogilvie were named the trustees of the fund.

Court's Decision.
Attorney R. G. Thompson, counsel for the hospital board and the Red Cross, which heard the dispute last fall. This court last month ruled the fund should be administered by five trustees to be appointed by the common pleas court. The trustees, by the court's order, are authorized to use the money for all wars. In case no memorial is erected the fund is to be used solely for World war veterans as the board may direct.

Upon consent of the veterans' posts and other organizations involved in the suit, the trustees named several months ago under the ruling of common pleas court, were reappointed in conformity with the decision of the court of appeals.

JAZZ COMPOSER
CLAIMS MACKAY GIRL AS BRIDE

Irving Berlin Weds
Pretty Heiress to $30,000,000.

"HAPPY," THEY SAY
Despite Wealth, They
Ride to Wedding in Subway.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Irving Berlin, famous composer of jazz music, and his bride, who was Miss Ellen Mackay, daughter of Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company, were honeymooning today—but where, none of their friends could say. The couple, after a few hurried words to reporters, in which they said they were "so happy," dashed away in their automobile.

They have planned an extended European trip, it was learned, and had made arrangements to sail on the Leviathan next Saturday.

Reports were current this morning that they were en route to the Adirondacks, and also that they were on their way to Florida, but most of their close friends believe they are right here in New York.

Society is Surprised.
Society was pleasantly surprised, although somewhat stunned by the sudden marriage, while Broadway, which knows and admires Berlin, a poor boy who came up from the East Side to fame and riches, smiled and applauded.

The bride's millionaire father had nothing to add to his first brief comment that the marriage was "without my knowledge or approval."

The bride is a Roman Catholic and Berlin is a Jew. He is 37, she is 22.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, wife of a noted surgeon, had been reported as desiring her daughter to follow the dictates of her heart in the romance, but today she declined to say whether she approved or disapproved.

Berlin denied that any dispensation had been sought from the Catholic authorities at Rome for the wedding. It was reported last June that a request had been made to Pope Pius, endorsed by Cardinal Hayes, of New York, for sanction of their marriage.

Defies Wrath of Father.
The couple were married yesterday afternoon in the municipal building by Deputy City Clerk James J. McCormick in the presence of a few witnesses. The couple, both wealthy, rode to the municipal building in the subway.

Miss Mackay is heiress to a fortune of $30,000,000. Berlin's individual fortune exceeds $1,000,000.

In marrying Berlin, Miss Mackay defied the wrath of her wealthy father who for two years has fought with every means at his disposal to break up the match. Ellen yesterday agreed over the telephone to marry the foremost exponent of modern jazz immediately. Witnesses were summoned hastily and they were married.

After telephoning the news to friends, Berlin and his bride taxied to his apartment to await the arrival of Miss Mackay's maid with her clothes. After a wait, in which they were besieged by reporters, they drove off, refusing to disclose their destination.

Berlin Former Bowery Singer.
"We are married and we are very happy. That's all we care to say," they told reporters.

A reporter asked Miss Mackay if she had told her father.

"No," she replied, after a moment's hesitation.

Berlin, whose name originally was Isidore Baline, is the son of an immigrant rabbi who certified kosher meats in an east side butcher shop in the days when "Izzie" peddled papers. He became a writer in "Nigger Mike's," a rendezvous in the old Bowery, where he used to sing. His songs made a hit, and he was induced by friends to write others. He did, and became internationally famous.

The bride is Clarence Mackay's second daughter. She is a product of the most exclusive girl's schools and well-known and popular in the most exclusive circles.

CARD OF THANKS.
We wish to express our sincere thanks for the kindness, sympathy and assistance rendered us during the recent illness and death of our son, William.

Especially do we thank Mr. Plum and others for their comforting words to us in our bereavement, the singers and those who contributed the use of their cars and the beautiful floral offerings.

He is sadly missed but we mourn not as those having no hope. Our loss is his eternal gain.

Master of Magic Is Guest
At Rotary Club Luncheon

Thurston Appearing at Ceramic Theatre, Entertains
Club Members at Noon Meeting in Y. M. C. A.

Members of the Rotary club at their weekly luncheon meeting in the Y. M. C. A. today were entertained by Howard Thurston, noted magician, who is playing a two-day engagement at the Ceramic theatre. Thurston, with the assistance of T. E. Lewis, gave a slight-of-hand performance with cards.

The magician was introduced by Rev. Dr. Frank G. Fowler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, chairman of the meeting. He spoke briefly, dwelling upon his stage career and his home life.

In the absence of President Frank Weis, the meeting was in charge of Vice President Malcolm Thompson. The chorus singing was led by Attorney Blaine H. Cochran with Mrs. Danks Cochran at the piano. Mr. Cochran gave a vocal solo, "Pal of My Cradle Days."

Mrs. Suzanne Vervin Boles, attorney and counsel-at-law, of San Francisco, a former resident of this city, attended the meeting as a guest of Frank Campbell. Mrs. Boles is a native of this city, where she was known as Sue Vervin. She has been located on the Pacific coast for about 20 years.

Rotarians will not meet next Tuesday noon, but will attend the Chamber of Commerce dinner in the evening, when Josephus Daniels, executive of the navy, will be the speaker.

might not be paid until County Auditor C. E. Hamilton makes his settlement of taxes which are now coming into the county coffers. Inasmuch as taxpayers were given 30 days' grace, the settlement will be delayed until February or March. An installment of taxes, however, is expected before the end of January, when an other payroll will be due.

Board Re-organizes.
The board has not discussed any solution of the financial dilemma, but the admission that "something must be done" was made last night. Electors of the district voted a three-mile levy for a period of five years at the general election last fall, and they may be asked to approve another levy of two mills.

The board re-organized last night by re-electing D. F. White, president, and E. T. Weaver, vice-president. After the election, White thanked other members of the board for the honor.

R. B. Stevenson, building contractor, and C. A. Ferguson, third street grocer, were sworn in. Stevenson declared that he realized that to be a school board member was a "real man's job" and expressed a willingness "to do my little part" in making the schools a success.

Ferguson said a "big responsibility" rests upon the shoulders of the school board, and expressed himself as being "gratified in the manner in which the schools were progressing this year under the leadership of our new superintendent."

"I have not heard a single complaint concerning the schools this year, which I consider to be a record," Ferguson declared.

Rule on Glenmoor Question.
Stevenson takes the place vacated by R. W. Sample, whose term has expired. Ferguson, who has been named to serve the unexpired term of J. H. Brookes, who resigned last August, following a controversy over the adoption of a Bible course in the local schools, was unopposed in the November election.

The board instructed Superintendent C. S. McVay to readmit all children ten in the Glenmoor school who had been out of the school for 17 days or more because of the smallpox scare. This action was taken after the school board reported that County Health Commissioner York of Lisbon, had advised the vaccination of pupils in the district to check the spread of the disease.

Many parents opposed vaccination, the board was informed. Most of the pupils it is claimed, have been out of school for five or six weeks and that there is no danger of further contagion by admitting them to their classes even though they have not been vaccinated.

Dr. C. A. Fraser, city health commissioner who recently dismissed several pupils from the 8th street school because of smallpox cases, told members of the board there was no danger of contagion if the pupils were out of school for 17 days and not exposed to the disease during that period.

Dr. York and the county health nurse were to visit the Glenmoor school this morning to begin the vaccination of the 150 pupils enrolled there, but the board's decision blocked this move.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE PUBLIC REGARDING THE "Dutch Master" Coffee SLOGAN CONTEST

We regret that we could not award the cash prize of $15 to at least 100 more contestants, as there were at least that many more excellent suggestions that we could have used. In other cities where our Coffee is sold, similar contests were held, but in no other instance were the results, both as to the number of suggestions submitted—and the excellence of these responses as gratifying as in the contest held here. But wait—we have something in store for you. From time to time—we intend publishing suggestions as they were sent in—except for the name, which will be omitted. The originators of the slogans published, by identifying themselves at our stand, will be pleasantly rewarded.

We are herewith publishing the first of these slogans, whose authors will be rewarded.

Does This Happen To Be Yours?

Slogan Submitted—
"Dutch Master" Koffee, the Coffee with the "Preferred Reputation."

The one submitting the above slogan also contributed a poem which we deem highly worthy of publication.

Drink "Dutch Master" Coffee and Smile.

You have often heard it said,
That a smile upon the face
Makes, by far, the best impression
Than if it was beauty graced.

Yet, when life is blue and weary,
And ere hardly thinks worth while,
It's sort of hard, we must admit,
To always wear a smile.

But here's a tip that's soundly based,
And if tried, you, too, will say,
"Dutch Master" Coffee makes one feel Like smiling all the day.

So drink a cup of it for breakfast,
And your face will don a smile.
Then try another one at dinner,
And the grin will stretch a mile.

FIELD'S SHOW CAST ALL-STAR

Bert Swor, Jack Richards and Others Here Thursday.

Bert Swor, America's premier black-face comedian, is started in the 39th annual edition of the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which open their engagement at the Ceramic theater Thursday.

Jack Richards and Billy Church, America's sweetest singers, are the featured tenors of the production. And the entire cast is one of unusual talent and ability.

Bert Swor returns to the Field organization after several seasons in vaudeville, and his brand of comedy is one that you won't soon forget. His ability as a comedian has earned for him the reputation of being the most popular black-face comedian on the stage today. His style is inimitable and unique, and his comedy is of the best. Associated with him are Harry Frankel, Jack Kennedy, Johnny Healy and Joe McGee, all comedians of the first rank.

have made many ballads and songs. Jack Richards and Billy Church popular throughout the country through their careers with the Field Minstrels. Both have tenor voices of pure bell-like quality, and their numbers alone, and separately, have come to be the featured and looked forward to part of the minstrel show. Jack Richards has presented "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," for so many years that he is afraid that his patrons and friends will have tired long since of hearing it. So this year he has decided to leave it out of his repertoire unless the public demands to hear it. Billy and Leo Doran head the dancing chorus and will offer a most unique program of dancing.

Baton Rouge, La.—The desk at which the governor of Louisiana sits daily is a handsome piece of furniture made of Cressatan walnut, carved with matchless skill, and once served Maximilian while he occupied the throne as emperor of Mexico.

Legends say that after the execution of Maximilian the desk and two other pieces of furniture from the ill-fated emperor's office were brought to Louisiana and placed in the executive offices.

Quick Way to Stop Night Coughing

New Method is Remarkably Effective

No need to put up with that distressing, weakening, sleep-robbing night cough another night. For there is a simple but very effective treatment which, usually with a single dose, stops all irritation and lets you sleep soundly the whole night through.

This treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful at night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of night coughing. So the coughing stops quickly and you sleep all night undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

What is the magic of this amazingly effective remedy? Sloan's sends an increased supply of healing blood right to the spot that hurts. That's what conquers the pain. No need to rub. LASTING PEACE
DUBLIN'S HOPE
IN NEW TREATY

Ulster, as Well as Free State, Ends Border Dispute.

PROGRESS LOOMS

Cosgrove's Government Faces Precarious Situation.

DUBLIN — All Ireland, the North as well as the Free State, hopes for lasting peace as a result of the tripartite agreement reached with the British government in London.

President Cosgrove is still able to command a majority in the Dail, thus assuring his tenure of office, but on all sides it is admitted that his situation is precarious. President Cosgrove earnestly believes that peace will be the outcome of the dropping of the boundary line dispute with Ulster, but his hopes are not shared by other politicians of the Free State, and there is apparently no prospect at the moment of the cessation of the internecine quarrels which have characterized Irish politics for generations.

Eamon de Valera, leader of the Republicans, whose remaining outside the Dail with his followers, has found in the London agreement an issue on which he may renew his attacks on the Free State government, while inside the Dail, the Labor party, backed by some members of the Government party, propose to carry on their fight against the pact even to the extent of appealing to the courts to set aside the new pact. De Valera is under constant surveillance by the Free State police and his quarters and private papers have been searched, but no official action has been taken against him.

Cabinet Faces Fight.

President Cosgrove is still able to command a majority in the Dail, thus assuring his tenure of office, but on all sides it is admitted that his situation and that of his government is precarious.

Leading the fight against Cosgrove in the Dail is Thomas Johnson, leader of the Labor party, who was among those who demanded a referendum on the London pact.

Johnson is outspoken in his demands for the resignation of the Cosgrove ministry.

Asked by International News Service to comment on the present situation, Johnson said:

"I think the government ought to resign. The present ministry had no mandate from the people to partition the country. In fact that main appeal to the people when they went forward for election in 1923 was that they alone would be capable of bringing partition to an end. They were to secure such large slices of Six County territory that the rest of the North would have to come into the Free State."

Craig Hopes for Peace.

"I sincerely hope that there will be peace in Ireland, but I notice that Sir James Craig is retaining part of his special constables, a political armed force which exists mainly to repress political activities which he fears may become 'seditions'. These constables are hated by the Nationalists and they are sure to perpetuate antagonisms. Back of these is the semi-military force, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and behind these again a British army of undivulged strength encamped in the Six Counties."

"In the Free State there is an army of 15,000 men costing three million pounds ($15,000,000) per annum, and a police force, the civic guards, of close on 10,000 men. Admittedly these forces in themselves would be of little use in repelling an invasion from outside and their raison d'être lies in being ready to repress possible armed rising either in the Free State or in Ulster. This does not suggest peace. It is a state of affairs that will not make for the stability the country so badly needs."

Election Talked Of.

Johnson said he was not certain that a general election would be possible, and even so, did not anticipate that the Labor party could muster enough strength in the dail to take office. In political circles, however, it is being suggested that a coalition between the Labor party and the Republicans is not impossible.

Concerning these reports, Johnson said: "The Labor party will co-operate with any party which honestly endeavors to put into action the Democratic program of the first dail. To my mind the new cleavage will be between those who try to conform policy and program to the ideas prevailing in the north and those who think that Ireland's future lies along the Irish-Ireland lines. I should say that politically the future is with the latter."

A British association has been formed in Siam to support British commercial and general interests in that country.

TRUSTEES HOLD INITIAL MEET

Arrangements Made to Take Over Money
Under Green Law.

Madison township trustees elected last November held their first meeting in the West Point Grange hall last Saturday and organized. The board is composed of William Travis, George M. Ellis and Thomas Harvey. Roy M. Gilmore is clerk-treasurer of the township.

The trustees appeared before the county commissioners this week to arrange to take over the appropriation of $1,000 under the Green road law for the improvement of their No. 1 secondary highway system, which is that road extending from the Brick church on the Wellsville-Salineville road west to connect with the Wellsville-Salineville road in Yellow Creek township. About one and one-half mile of this road is in Yellow Creek township, and those trustees propose to improve that highway at the same time the work is being done in Madison township.

By this improvement, it will not be necessary for south traffic to enter Wellsville in order to get onto the Wellsville-Salineville road as a "near-cut" road will be possible.

Trustees of both townships propose to start work on this cross county road as soon as the weather permits. Each township is to receive $1,000 from the state for a mile of the road, and the property fronting the road can be assessed under this law up to $2,000 per mile, thereby creating a fund of $3,000 per mile for improved road purposes.

STATE CAGERS DEFEAT PITT

Whitey Bell Hoops Ball Eight Times for Buckeyes.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Ohio State's Western conference championship basketball team had a 47-34 victory over the Pitt cagers to its credit today through the flashy floor work of ham and Bell to amass field goals. Dempsey and the ability of Cunningham. Twice Pitt tied the score, but each time the Ohioans found little difficulty in regaining the lead at will. In the last period, State outplayed Pitt in every department of the game.

Whitey Bell, a former Erie, Pa., boy, tagged eight field goals for the visitors.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

The honorable order of the sons of the Emerald Isle, being collected by Joseph McCarthy, pilot of the Chicago Cubs, has lately been swelled by the admittance to membership of Mr. Michael Doolan.

Mr. Doolan's presence is required, due to the activities of the Cub leaders in rounding up young shortstops. Doolan, once one of the sweetest shortstops in the game—and the most graceful—is counted on to teach these newcomers the fine points of covering the territory between second and third and the pitcher's box and short left field, as a good shortstop should do.

Doolan, even his place in the hall of fame as a member of the Philadelphia National league club. He was with that club when the Federal league was organized and was persuaded to jump to the Baltimore club of the outlaw organization.

When peace was declared Doolan was awarded to the Chicago Cubs in the general distribution of players and saw service with that club in 1916. However, his days were about over and after playing with the Giants and Dodgers for a time he left the big show and became interested in the game from the coaching and scouting angles, spending most of his time with the Syracuse and Baltimore clubs.

Doolan's name on the Cub roster will be listed along with such good names as Cooney, Kelly, Fitzgerald, Shannon, Burke, O'Doul and Hartnett. But the uniforms will be gray and white, as usual.

Speaking of shortstops, we would like to hear from the major portion of the American and National league clubs as to why, during their mad scrambles to get infielders, they permitted the Cincinnati Reds to send Jimmy Caveney to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league.

Now the report was prevalent last season that Jimmy's loss was a bit weak. If this be the only reason it is a thin one. Given the choice between a weak pair of legs and a weak brain the average manager will take the weak-legged one for a shortstop.

The Reds certainly didn't let Caveney go because of his age. For the man they got in exchange—Frank Emmer—is Jimmy's age.

Emmer's advantage over Caveney, on paper at least, is his hitting ability. But that ability is gauged only by his work on the coast. He had a trial with the Reds in 1914 and has been a minor leaguer ever since.

The Pirates have Glenn Wright, one of the greatest shortstops the game has produced in late years. The Giants have the brilliant Travis Jackson. The Cleveland club has Joey Sewell. Connie Mack has Dykes, Galloway and Hale and a couple of other good men. But the other clubs are weak in the shortstopping department.

And the interesting part of it is that the Cincinnati Reds have Sam Robins, who stacks up as better than the average shortstop, so why toss out Caveney to get simply another shortstop "hope"?

WILLS-LENGLEN MEETING NOT FAR OFF

AMERICAN STAR READY TO SAIL

Hopes She Can Play French Champion Several Times.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—What, to the casual eye, seemed to be a taller and, perhaps, a more robust Helen Wills than the east had previously known appeared today to take her final workout in America on the eve of her departure for abroad and the Suzanne Lenglen match, for which all the world has waited these several years. No one seemed prepared to venture whether the additional inch or so meant less speed or more endurance or neither or both.

It merely was there to be noted for what it might be worth, if anything.

Miss Wills herself was singularly uncommunicative although courteous as always. The writer neglected to ask her whether she liked spinach with her ice cream but it mattered not. She would have answered "yes" or "no," according to her conscience.

"I'm going abroad on a pleasure trip," she said by way of dismissing herself from further consideration. "If I can win tennis matches, the pleasure will be greater. If I can't I won't let it spoil my trip."

Hopes to Meet Suzanne.

On the subject of Suzanne she would not betray more than polite interest by so much as a word, a look or a gesture, although she did say she hoped to meet the French champion not once but several times. She said she thought a series of three matches would better determine the question of supremacy but added with a smile: "I could tell you more about that after the first match."

It is to this opening clash, by the way, that those close to the American claim she looks forward with the highest hope. It will take place on the hard courts of the Riviera, if Suzanne doesn't get housewired's knee or something in the meantime, and critics of tennis form are agreed that Helen is at her best on this type of playing surface.

Asked about it today, she evaded a direct reply, merely stating that she was more accustomed to hard courts because of her play in California. However, tennis critics claim that she is faster afoot on clay or asphalt than she is on the turf.

It will be turf at Wimbledon and the heaviest kind, at that. But Helen thinks she will do much better there this year than she did in 1924.

Lacked Practice Last Year.

"I only had a few weeks practice in England last time," she said. "This year I plan to be on the ground at least two months in advance of the championship, and if I can't win, I will simply know that it isn't in me."

Her remaining plans were vague, except that she was certain she would return early in July to get ready for the defense of her American title. The tentative schedule mapped out calls for a brief workout at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, this afternoon, her first attempt to play on indoor courts; then the business of sailing tomorrow on the De Grasse, which is due to arrive at Havre on January 15, after which she will spend a few days in Paris and proceed to Cannes.

She said she didn't know what tournaments she would enter there but hoped to play constantly. Then she bowed herself out.

RISKO-FITZ PUT ON TAME BOUT

Cleveland Wins Over Son of Famous Fighter.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—Coming as an anti-climax after an unusually good boxing card at Public hall last night, Johnny Risko, Cleveland's heavy-weight hope, and young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of one of the most famous fighters of all time, put on an extremely tame exhibition, the winner, according to Referee Matt Hinkle, being Risko. The decision, however, was not a popular one.

Johnny Datto, Filipino, scored a technical knockout over Tommy Noble in the sixth round of the semi-final, the referee stopping the fight when it was apparent Noble could not go on.

He's Anxious to Win British Open So Studies Those Who've Been Hogging Title

A small army of British golfers, pro and am (meaning amateur), have had high hopes the last few years of joining the ranks of Braid, Vardon, Taylor and the other illustrious ones who have won the British open title in the past. The main obstacle in the paths of these new hopefuls, it seems, has been the American golfers, who by their very act in winning the coveted British event four out of five years have kept the jolly Brits from so doing.

Now comes to the United States one of these fabled British gentlemen with his golf clubs and an idea.

That idea is that the best way of learning how to turn back the American threat in next year's British open is to spend most of the time between now and next summer learning how to play the American's game.

That gentleman is Arthur Compston, holder of the British professional championship, the man who came closest to nosing out Long Jim Barnes in the open last year, and the man, who almost captured the French open championship of 1925, the second most coveted event in European golf circles.

Compston has come to this country for an extended tour with Arnaud Massey, winner of the French open last summer, and recognized as one of the few outstanding Irishmen of the continent today. The tour will throw them against such opponents as Bobby Jones, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, and a dozen or more outstanding figures in American golf.

Gets Taste of U. S. "Fire."

Compston's first match, that of him and Massey against Jones and Watts Gunn, future great and Jones' pupil, has already given Compston a good chance to study the style of the great tournament player in the game today. Bobby Jones, by Gunn, Compston found the dash and the young American tourney players take into their game. Great Britain takes its golf calmly. Patience is the watchword among the younger set. This dash, confident style of U. S. youths like Gunn must be interesting to Compston, a newcomer to this country.

Compston meets Barnes under conditions which give the former a better opportunity to study the Long one's game—a steady, deadly, stroke eating pace that carried him through the open title last summer, after Jack Hutchison and Walter Hagen, between them, had hogged it three out of four years.

As a matter of fact it was Compston's desire to win the British open next season that caused him at first to ston down the offer of invitation of D. U. re, well proportioned and (for female) good looking.

Compston has been called the "white hope" of British golf. Perhaps with this sobriquet although the quality of his golf also suggests it, Compston is a veritable giant in stature down the offer of invitation of D. U. re, well proportioned and (for female) good looking.

SYRACUSE GETS CIRCUIT STAKE

Outbids Two Rivals for $70,000 Purse Event.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—The most important action at yesterday's grand circuit meeting here was the award of the new $70,000 Hamiltonian stake race for three-year-old trotters, to the New York State fair, at Syracuse. The New York organization outbid Atlanta and Kalamazoo, offering $8,000 for the event. The purse will be provided by entry fees.

Whether or not a meeting will be held at Milwaukee this year appeared problematic today, the Milwaukee organization having asked for dates during the week of August 30, for which Syracuse had put in a prior bid. Unless Milwaukee will accept other dates it seemed likely that no grand circuit meeting would be held there.

Atlanta has not asked for dates, but it was expected that at least one week's racing would take place there.

Canton Passers Trim Millers Jewelers Show Class Against Miller Bros.

COLUMBIANA, Jan. 5.—Columbian's two independent basketball teams broke even in two fast games. The Central Markets at Salem defeated the Salem Tires, 30-22, a team captained by Charles Reinher, old C. H. S. star. The Tires are leading the city league and are contenders for the city championship. Burkle for the Central Markets made 16 of his team's points. Leo Harrold played in Benninghoff's place.

At the Columbian high school auditorium the Miller Bros. team met defeat at the hands of Jack Art Jewelers of Canton, probably the fastest team that ever appeared on this floor, the score being 46-33. The passing of the visitors was the best seen here in years and their superior team work was too much for the inexperienced local team. Hawkins, usually a star, was so closely guarded that he could only make two baskets, while Thomas was held to the same number.

Youngstown Fans Indicate Preference for Headliners.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5.—Youngstown boxing fans in 1925 were not so keen about their favorite pastime as they were in 1924, according to figures announced by Matchmaker Al Zell. Twenty hours in 1925 brought a gross of $62,391, nearly $10,000 less than the 1924 figures.

Such bouts as Jimmy Jones-Willie Harmon, Frankie Genaro-Eddie O'Dowd, Jack Malone-Dick Evans, Al Corbett-Rosey Stoy offered evidence that the fans patronized the sport to better advantage when boys in the upper rows of the circles were given the preference over principals striving for recognition.

Jones and Harmon attracted the most customers and the largest receipts, which totalled $5,777.

John Sand, Philadelphia, made the most putouts, 352, and committed the most errors, 60. Glenn Wright, Pittsburgh, had the most assists, 530, the greatest number of total chances, 924, and engaged in the most double plays, 109.

Among the outfielders Leslie Mann, Boston, heads the list with a percentage of .992 in 57 contests, but the real leader is Curtis Walker, Cincinnati, who fielded for a percentage of .982 in 145 games. Edward Brown, Brooklyn, made the most putouts, 449, and had the most total chances, 469. James Welsh, Boston, made the most assists, 27. Max Carey, Pittsburgh, committed the most errors, 20, and Clifton Heathcote, Chicago, took part in most double plays, 8.

Harry Gowdy, New York, returned a perfect fielding average in 41 contests among the catchers. The leading fielding catcher, however, is Frank Snyder of New York, with a percentage of .985 in 96 games. Charles Hartnett, Chicago, had the most putouts, 409, most assists, 114, most errors, 23, most total chances, 546, and tied with Earl Smith, Pittsburgh, for taking part in the most double plays, 15 each. James Wilson, Philadelphia; Eugene Hargrave, Cincinnati; Earl Smith, Pittsburgh; and James Taylor, Brooklyn, are in a tie for the most passed balls.

Sixteen pitchers returned perfect averages in their fielding efforts. The honor of leading fielding pitcher belongs to Clarence Mitchell, by virtue of his having accepted the most chances, 75, without error. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, had the most putouts, 18, most assists, 52, most total chances, 117, engaged in the most double plays, 11, and with Adolfo Lape, Cincinnati, is tied for the most errors, 7 each.

STATE CAGERS DEFEAT PITT

Whitey Bell Hoops Ball Eight Times for Buckeyes.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Ohio State's Western conference championship basketball team had a 47-34 victory over the Pitt cagers to its credit today through the flashy floor work of ham and Bell to amass field goals. Dempsey and the ability of Cunningham. Twice Pitt tied the score, but each time the Ohioans found little difficulty in regaining the lead at will. In the last period, State outplayed Pitt in every department of the game. Whitey Bell, former Erie, Pa., boy, caged eight field goals for the visitors.

Pro Golf Stars Face Busy Month

Attractive Purses Hung up for Cash Performers.

Professional golfers will occupy a big share of the sports limelight during the month of January. A lot of real money has been hung up for the cash performers. Long Beach, Cal., awarded prizes of $2,000 in tournament play January 3 and 4, prior to the California open January 7-9 at Los Angeles, with various purses aggregating $10,000. The scene then shifts to San Antonio for the Texas open, January 14-16, worth $6,000. A similar amount will be awarded at the Dallas open, Jan. 21-23. SPORTS DONE BROWN

The honorable order of the sons of the Emerald Isle, being collected by Joseph McCarthy, pilot of the Chicago Cubs, has lately been swelled by the admittance to membership of Mr. Michael Doolan.

Mr. Doolan's presence is required, due to the activities of the Cub leaders in rounding up young shortstops. Doolan, once one of the sweetest shortstops in the game and the most graceful—is counted on to teach these newcomers the fine points of covering the territory between second and third and the pitcher's box and short left field, as a good shortstop should do. Doolan won his place in the hall of fame as a member of the Philadelphia National league club. He was with that club when the Federal league was organized and was persuaded to jump to the Baltimore club of the outlaw organization. When peace was declared Doolan was awarded to the Chicago Cubs in the general distribution of players and saw service with that club in 1916. However, his days were about over and after playing with the Giants and Dodgers for a time he left the big show and became interested in the game from the coaching and scouting angles, spending most of his time with the Syracuse and Baltimore clubs.

Doolan's name on the Cub roster will be listed along with such good names as Cooney, Kelly, Fitzgerald, Shannon, Burke, O'Doul and Hartnett. But the uniforms will be gray and white, as usual.

Speaking of shortstops, we would like to hear from the major portion of the American and National league clubs as to why, during their mad scrambles to get infielders, they permitted the Cincinnati Reds to send Jimmy Caveney to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league. Now the report was prevalent last season that Jimmy's legs were a bit weak. If this be the only reason it is a thin one. Given the choice between a weak pair of legs and a weak brain the average manager will take the weak-legged one for a shortstop. The Reds certainly didn't let Caveney go because of his age. For the man they got in exchange—Frank Emmer—is Jimmy's age.

Emmer's advantage over Caveney, on paper at least, is his hitting ability. But that ability is gauged only by his work on the coast. He had a trial with the Reds in 1916 and has been a minor leaguer ever since. The Pirates have Glenn Wright, one of the greatest shortstops the game has produced in late years. The Giants have the brilliant Travis Jackson. The Cleveland club has Jove Sewell. Connie Mack has Dykes, Galaway and Hale and a couple of other good men. But the other clubs are weak in the shortstopping department. And the interesting part of it is that the Cincinnati Reds have Sam Bohne, who stacks up as better than the average shortstop, so why toss out Caveney to get simply another shortstop "hope?" Kobe is the largest tourist port in Japan.

WILLS-LENGLEN MEETING NOT FAR OFF

AMERICAN STAR READY TO SAIL

Hopes She Can Play French Champion Several Times.

By Davis J. Walsh. NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—What, to the casual eye, seemed to be a taller and, perhaps, a more robust Helen Wills than the east had previously known appeared today to take her final workout in America on the eve of her departure for abroad and the Suzanne Lenglen match, for which all the world has waited these several years. No one seemed prepared to venture whether the additional inch for so meant less speed or more endurance or neither or both. It merely was there, to be noted for what it might be worth, if anything. Miss Wills herself was singularly uncommunicative although courteous as always. The writer neglected to ask her whether she liked spinach with her ice cream but it mattered not. She would have answered "yes" or "no," according to her conscience.

"I'm going abroad on a pleasure trip," she said by way of dismissing herself from further consideration. "If I can win tennis matches, the pleasure will be greater. If I can't I won't let it spoil my trip."

Hopes to Meet Suzanne. On the subject of Suzanne she would not betray more than polite interest by so much as a word, a look or a gesture, although she did say she hoped to meet the French champion not once but several times. She said she thought a series of three matches would better determine the question of supremacy but added with a smile: "I could tell you more about that after the first match."

It is to this opening clash, by the way, that those close to the American claim she looks forward with the highest hope. It will take place on the hard courts of the Riviera, if Suzanne doesn't get housewired's knee or something in the meantime, and critics of tennis form are agreed that Helen is at her best on this type of playing surface.

Asked about it today, she evaded a direct reply, merely stating that she was more accustomed to hard courts because of her play in California. However, tennis critics claim that she is faster afoot on clay or asphalt than she is on the turf.

It will be turf at Wimbledon and the heaviest kind, at that. But Helen thinks she will do much better there this year than she did in 1924.

Lacked Practice Last Year. "I only had a few weeks practice in England last time," she said. "This year I plan to be on the ground almost two months in advance of the championship, and if I can't win, I will simply know that it isn't in me." Her remaining plans were vague, except that she was certain she would return early in July to get ready for the defense of her American title. The tentative schedule mapped out calls for a brief workout at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, this afternoon, her first attempt to play on indoor courts; then the business of sailing tomorrow on the De Grasse, which is due to arrive at Havre on January 15, after which she will spend a few days in Paris and proceed to Cannes. She said she didn't know what tournaments she would enter there but hoped to play constantly. Then she bowed herself out.

RISKO-FITZ PUT ON TAME BOUT

Cleveland Wins Over Son of Famous Fighter.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—Coming as an anti-climax after an unusually good boxing card at Public hall last night, Johnny Risko, Cleveland's heavyweight hope, and young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of the late, but not an extremely tame exhibition, the winner, according to Referee Matt Hinkle, being Risko. The decision, however, was not a popular one.

Johnny Datto, Filipino, scored a technical knockout over Tommy Noble in the sixth round of the semifinal, the referee stopping the fight when it was apparent Noble could not go on.

Tony Getebanau, of Buffalo, fighting at 188 pounds, gave the fans a surprise by scoring a draw with Bud Gorman, weight, 199, a highly touted New Yorker.

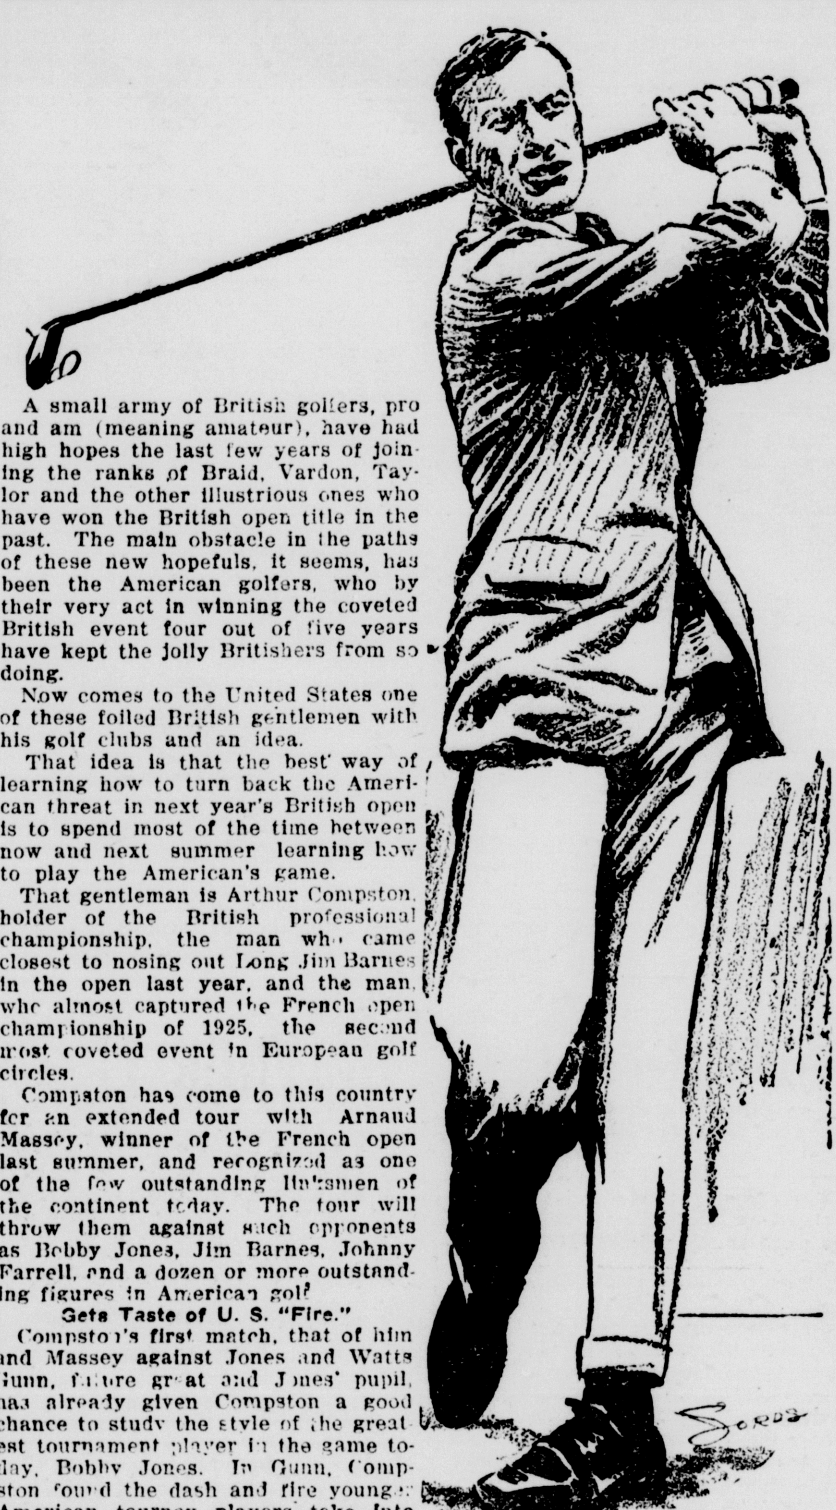

Joey Abrams, Akron featherweight, and Moxie Miller, of Cleveland, fought a well-earned draw.

U. S. G. A. Will Elect W. C. Fownes President

NEW YORK.—William C. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburgh, former national amateur champion, will become head of the United States Golf association at the annual session Saturday in Chicago, which will follow two meetings of the greens committee.

A private company has bought the telephone system of Trieste and will install modern equipment.

He's Anxious to Win British Open So Studies Those Who've Been Hogging Title

Arthur Compston.

Compston's first match, that of him and Massey against Jones and Watts "Junn, future great and Jones' pupil, has already given Compston a good chance to study the style of the great tournament player in the same today. Bobby Jones, in Gunn, Compston found the dash and fire young American tourney players take into their game. Great Britain takes its golf calmly. Patience is the watchword among the younger set. This dashing, confident style of U. S. youths like Gunn must be interesting to Compston, a newcomer to this country.

Compston meets Barnes under conditions which give the former a better opportunity to study the Long one's game—a steady, deadly, stroke eating pace that carried him through the open title last summer, after Jack Hutchinson and Walter Hagen, between whom had hogged it three out of four years.

As a matter of fact it was Compston's desire to win the British open next season that caused him at first to turn down the offer of invitation of D. U. re, well proportioned and (for female note) good looking.

Collegiates Protest Middleweight Champ Will Fight on Coast

NEW YORK.—The National Collegiate Athletic association will appeal to Commissioner K. M. Landis for his support to curb the practice of organized baseball in offering professional contracts to college undergraduates, Palmer Pierce, president of the body, announced yesterday.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Harry Grab, Pittsburgh, world's middleweight champion, may fight on the coast next month. He has already signed a contract with Ted Moore, England's middleweight king, for a bout Jan. 26.

FOUR FOREIGN TRACK CHAMPS TO INVADE U. S.

New Records are Expected During 1926 Campaign.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Every indication at the moment is that running "on the boards" this season will enjoy its era of greatest prosperity, exceeding even the 1924-25 campaign when Nurmi took the country by storm. He was only one man and, for the most part, he ran only one race a night.

What, then, may be the expected reaction to an athlete who dailies with records in the pole vault, middle distance runs and broad jump? Such a man is Charles Hoff, of Norway, who will come here for the indoor season in company with Huber Houben, a great German sprinter; Adrian Paulen, the Dutch middle distance, and George Goodwin, the English walker. The latter is the only foreign entry whose anticipated arrival can be viewed without emotion.

Co-Star With Nurmi. Hoff probably would have been the co-star with Nurmi of the last Olympic games if it hadn't been for an injured heel. He held the world's record for the pole vault at the time and afterward raised it to 13 feet 11 1/2 inches. His heel precluded participation in the vault; also in the running broad jump, in which he has bettered 24 feet.

Even handicapped as he was, he reached the finals of the great 800-meter event, but was shut out.

That's the kind of a mouth organ the American field will have to reckon with this winter. If he takes to the boards at all, he probably can beat any of our quarter-milers and will step with the best of them in the half. And even if unfamiliar conditions prevent him from vaulting to form, there is no reason to believe that he won't be able to top the world's indoor record of 13 feet.

Houben beat Paddock and Murchison several times, but little has been seen of him in international competition because of the anti-German feeling that prevailed after the war. He is an oddity of the track—a left-footed starter—and comes out of his holes as fast as any man in the game. What he will be able to do with small spikes on the boards remains to be seen, but that he will be an interesting performer is taken for granted.

In a Special Race. Paulen's lone start in this country was a special 600-yard race at Travers Island last summer. There he ran right over our best, Helfrich. Marders and Holden, in the stretch to win very impressively. He, too, may be handicapped indoors because of his inclination to run high.

Still, anyone with the records of Houben and Paulen will be dangerous until they become acclimated to indoor conditions. After that, they might be unbeatable.

In any case, with four champion invaders competing almost meet for meet, it either will be the greatest indoor season in history or John L. Sullivan was a French Canadian.

PARIS.—Suzanne Lenglen is suffering from a severe cold, it was learned yesterday, the announcement dispelling fears aroused by her retirement from the Haulstie tournament at Cannes. She declared she would play this week at Nice.

SYRACUSE GETS CIRCUIT STAKE

Outbids Two Rivals for $70,000 Purse Event.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—The most important action at yesterday's grand circuit meeting here was the award of the new $70,000 Hambletonian stake race for three-year-old trotters, to the New York State fair, at Syracuse. The New York organization outbid Atlanta and Kalamazoo, offering $8,000 for the event. The purse will be provided by entry fees.

Whether or not a meeting will be held at Milwaukee this year appeared problematical today, the Milwaukee organization having asked for dates during the week of August 30, for which Syracuse had put in a prior bid. Unless Milwaukee will accept other dates it seemed likely that no grand circuit meeting would be held there this year.

Atlanta has not asked for dates, but it was expected that at least one week's racing would take place there.

Canton Passers Trim Millers

Jewelers Show Class Against Miller Bros.

COLUMBIANA, Jan. 5.—Columbiana's two independent basketball teams broke even in two fast games. The Central Markets at Salem defeated the Salem Tires, 30-22, a team captained by Charles Reinher, old C. H. S. star. The Tires are leading the City league and are contenders for the city championship. Burkle for the Central Markets made 16 of his team's points. Leo Harrold played in Benninghoff's place.

At the Columbiana high school auditorium the Miller Bros. team met defeat at the hands of Jack Art Jewelers of Canton, probably the fastest team that ever appeared on this floor, the score being 46-33. The passing of the visitors was the best seen here in years and their superior team work was too much for the inexperienced local team. Hawkins, usually a star, was so closely guarded that he could only make two baskets, while Thomas was held to the same number.

Fight Receipts Show Decrease

Youngstown Fans Indicate Preference for Headliners.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5.—Youngstown boxing fans in 1925 were not so keen about their favorite pastime as they were in 1924, according to figures announced by Matchmaker Al Zull. Twenty bouts in 1925 brought a gross of $62,391, nearly $10,000 less than the 1924 figures.

Such bouts as Jimmy Jones-Willie Harmon, Frankie Genaro-Eddie O'Dowd, Jock Malone-Dick Evans, Al Corbett-Rosey Stoy offered evidence that the fans patronized the sport to better advantage when boys in the upper rows of 1st circles were given the preference over principals striving for recognition.

Jones and Harmon attracted the most customers and the largest receipts, which totalled $5,777.

You Know Knute: Here's the Man Who Taught Him

Everyone knows the lower face of the two above. It's that of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's football wizard. But the man at the top may not be so well known to present day grid fans. He's Jess C. Harper, who coached Notre Dame when Rockne was a player there and taught Rockne the game. Harper's a prominent Kansas cattleman now and Rockne's visiting him.

TRAYNOR LEADS THIRD SACKERS

National Loop Averages Give Buc High Ranking.

ALTHOUGH Walter Holke, with Philadelphia and Cincinnati, tops the first basemen in fielding, with a percentage of .996 in 38 games, Maurice Burris, Boston, is the real leader. Burris, in 151 games fielded for a percentage of .990, James Bottomley, St. Louis, made the most putouts, 1,466, committed the greatest number of errors, 21, had the most total chances, 1,561, and engaged in the most double plays, 133. Burris had the most assists, 85.

Earl Adams, Chicago, leads the second basemen, with a percentage of .983. Adams made the most putouts, 354, had the most assists, 551, and the greatest number of total chances, 921. Ed Moore, Pittsburgh, committed the most errors, 36, and Hugh Critz, Cincinnati, took part in the most double plays, 96.

While Andrew High, of Brooklyn and Boston, is the nominal leader among the third basemen, with a percentage of .963 in 71 games, the actual leader is Harold Traynor of Pittsburgh. In 150 games Traynor fielded for a percentage of .956, made the most putouts, 226, had the most assists, 303, the most total chances, 553, and shared in the most double plays, 41. Lester Bell, St. Louis, made the most errors, 36.

Though Horace Ford, Brooklyn shortstop, has a percentage of .966 in 66 games, fielding honors for this position belong to David Bancroft, Boston, who, in 125 games acquired a percentage of .945. John Sand, Philadelphia, made the most putouts, 352, and committed the most errors, 60. Glenn Wright, Pittsburgh, had the most assists, 530, the greatest number of total chances, 924, and engaged in the most double plays, 109.

Among the outfielders Leslie Mann, Boston, heads the list with a percentage of .992 in 57 contests, but the real leader is Curtis Walker, Cincinnati, who fielded for a percentage of .9828 in 145 games. Edward Brown, Brooklyn, made the most putouts, 449, and had the most total chances, 469. James Welsh, Boston, made the most assists, 27. Max Carey, Pittsburgh, committed the most errors, 29, and Clifton Heathcote, Chicago, took part in most double plays, 8.

Harry Gowdy, New York, returned a perfect fielding average in 41 contests among the catchers. The leading fielding catcher, however, is Frank Snyder of New York, with a percentage of .985 in 96 games. Charles Hartnett, Chicago, had the most putouts, 409, most assists, 114, most errors, 23, most total chances, 546, and tied with Earl Smith, Pittsburgh, for taking part in the most double plays, 15 each. James Wilson, Philadelphia; Eugene Hargrave, Cincinnati; Earl Smith, Pittsburgh; and James Taylor, Brooklyn, are in a tie for the most passed balls.

Sixteen pitchers returned perfect averages in their fielding efforts. The honor of leading fielding pitcher belongs to Clarence Mitchell, by virtue of his having accepted the most chances, 75, without error. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, had the most putouts, 18, most assists, 52, most total chances, 117, engaged in the most double plays, 11, and with Adolfo Luque, Cincinnati, is tied for the most errors, 7 each.

AUTO LICENSES SHOW REDUCTION

Large number of automobile owners in the state failed to take out licenses by the first of the year, according to reports filed at the office of the state road commission at Charleston.

Many are expected to secure tags this month as their applications were not accompanied by a certificate of title which the auto law provides must be attached to the application blank.

Total number of licenses issued is below that of last year.

Assessors at Work.

County assessors are now making their rounds listing real and personal property, also taking a farm census. This latter feature was decided on after an opinion had been given by the state attorney general to that effect.

ROAD MARKERS TO BE ERECTED

The state road commission has concurred in the report of the point board on interstate highways, which recently announced the selection of a system of interstate routes to be known as United States highways. The system of signs and markers recommended by the board was also approved by the commission. The joint board was appointed by Governor Gore, when he was secretary of agriculture in President Coolidge's cabinet.

West Virginia has six United States highways, three running north and south, and three east and west. Those running north and south are designated by odd numbers, and those east and west by even numbers.

Thurston, Master Magician, Opens Two-Day Engagement

Program, Which Delighted Large Audience Last Night, Will be Repeated at Ceramic Theatre Tonight.

Thurston, the master magician and noted illusionist, is now on his 20th annual tour, entertained a large audience at the Ceramic theatre last night, when he opened a two-day engagement. He gave a matinee performance this afternoon and will repeat his program tonight.

With new magic, conjuring, legermain, sleight-of-hand, illusions and sorcery, Thurston offers pure and recreative diversion to men, women and children of all walks of life. His program is such that every human emotion is aroused at some time during the performance. There are thrills that cause the hair to rise on your head, the palm of the hands to grow moist, and to feel that some one had surreptitiously sprinkled your spine with ice water. Suddenly, greatly to your surprise, you find yourself submerged in a bath of tinkling delight. To those who love the glamour of the Orient, with its rich and exotic colorings, Thurston's creations will be a pleasure indeed.

The tired business man is not forgotten, for the famous magician has a company of 36, including a bevy of pretty girls, who assist in the large and varied mystery program that includes "The Great East Indian Rope Trick," "Broadcasting a Woman," "Beauty, the Vanishing Horse," "Disintegration of a Human Form," "The Mystic Polliwog," "The Vanishing Donkey," "The Human Pin-Cushion," "The Elastic Lady," "The Phantom Princess," who floats over the stage into the orchestra, then vanishing like a cloud in thin air.

Thurston requires three 60-foot baggage cars to transport the paraphernalia of his hundred mysteries.

Troitzky says that woman's lot, in Russia, is happier than anywhere else on earth. That self-approving note will be questioned, since, no matter what laws may say, a woman's lot depends on the sort of husband she draws in the marriage lottery.

Beyond question, however, women in Russia, as elsewhere, are better off than they were. Read histories of Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great, the chapters on woman and marriage, and you learn that there was room for improvement.

On his wedding night the Russian husband's first present was a whip. This he fastened in his belt, saying to the bride, "I hope I shall never need it." When the bride and bridegroom retired she pulled off his boots and he struck her across the shoulders with the whip gently to prove his authority. He was less gentle later.

Ancient religious instruction, imported into Russia from the east, gave exact directions for wife-beating and taught men to suspect and despise women. "What is woman? A net to tempt men. With her clear face and her high set eyes she works spells. What is a woman? A viper's pest."

The Russian was warned to keep his wife shut in.

"She sits behind 27 locks. She sits locked in with 27 keys, so that bold comrades may not see her."

Bold comrades saw her occasionally, however, and rather intimately, in the olden days, you may also learn from Waliszewski.

But old Russia had no monopoly of contempt for women. The Christian church through the black middle ages preached contempt for women, as vile creatures, used by Satan to tempt man to destruction.

Even Solomon, wisest of the seven wise men, said, "The wise man thanks the gods daily for having made him a Greek and not a barbarian, a man and not a beast, a male and not a female."

In Turkey, where the harem is officially abolished and men are ordered to get along with one wife, some of the Turks take the change with bitterness. One old Turk killed himself and his many wives, rather than change from an oriental hennery to a modern home.

A whitewashing report covers up responsibility for the many killings in that needless Shenandoah disaster.

It is stated that Commander Lansdowne is "exonerated." He needs no exoneration. But the people that have followed the swivel chair warriors in Washington were responsible for Lansdowne's death.

Interurban Car Service Crippled By Power Breaks

Interurban car service between East Liverpool and Steubenville was crippled this morning due to breaks in the power lines in the vicinity of Stratton, Jefferson county.

The first break occurred at 7:30 o'clock, when the power was off for about a minute. There was another break at 9 o'clock.

The Steubenville district was more seriously affected by the break than East Liverpool. Locomotives were started from the local office to trace the trouble when the first suspension occurred, but at noon had not reported the cause.

ROBERT B. SCOTT HUNTENDS IN PRISON CELL

Suspected Slayer is Believed in San Quentin.

AWAITS PAROLE

Charged With Killing Chicago Drug Clerk in Hold-up.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—One of the most feverish manhuntings of recent years was at an end today if identification of "John Redding," serving a robbery sentence in San Quentin prison in California and on the eve of being paroled, as Robert B. Scott is proved correct.

For two years Scott has been assiduously sought on a charge of the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, during a hold-up—the same charge that three times brought his brother, Russell, to the edge of the gallows and eventually landed him in Chester asylum for the criminal insane at McHard, Ill., with hanging as his fate if he ever is found sane again.

During half of those two years Russell Scott, his devoted wife, his aged father and mother, vainly broadcast through every available method of publicity a plea that Robert surrender and give his brother a chance to escape the rope by taking upon himself the blame for firing the shot that killed young Maurer.

It was a "cheap" crime in the first place, the killing of a holdup victim who chanced to anger two bandits—but the aftermath stirred a continent.

West is Re-elected President of City Hospital Board

George E. West was re-elected president of the East Liverpool City Hospital association at the annual meeting last evening. Joseph Betz was again named secretary.

The following directors were named for a term of three years: C. R. Boyce, J. M. Manor, J. S. Hilbert, Samuel B. Burgess and Frank L. Wells.

The directors will meet Friday evening to reorganize and receive reports for the past year.

Secretary Emmett Gaston Reports Unpaid Bills Amounting to $7,000, With Only $1,600 in Bank.

ANOTHER $38,000 DEFICIT LOOMS

D. F. White Re-elected President, While F. T. Weaver is Again Chosen Vice-president at Re-Organization Meeting.

Approximately $30,000 "in the hole," the East Liverpool district public schools reopened yesterday for the spring term.

The financial embarrassment was revealed at last night's board of education meeting, when it was admitted the 1925 funds were exhausted on December 1.

Fear Large Deficit.

In order to meet the December payroll of teachers and janitors, the board borrowed $25,000 last month, which came out of the funds allotted for 1926. Of this money there is a balance of about $1,600 in the bank, with unpaid bills estimated at $7,000.

To make matters worse, Emmett Gaston, secretary-treasurer, warned the board that an additional $38,000 deficit is expected at the end of 1926. The estimated expense of the schools during the calendar year are $346,000. With a shrinkage of between 10 and 12 per cent in tax collections, there is little likelihood that more than $308,000 shall be forthcoming from the county.

If these fears are fulfilled the schools will face a shortage of $65,000 or $70,000 before the end of the year.

Cause of Shortage.

The shortage last year is said to have been due to the shrinkage in tax collections. The millage, according to school board officials, is fixed by the county tax commission on the basis that all taxes are paid, but the commission failed to take into consideration delinquency.

The 1925 school levy was 8.71 mills, which netted the local schools about $290,000, as compared to the estimated requirements of about $315,000. Believing the reapportionment would mean increased revenue, the board last fall re-established domestic science, manual training and mechanical drawing courses in the high school, organized part-time and ceramic schools, which increased the operating expenses for 1925 to about $346,000.

The levy for 1926 is 9.15 mills, which, it is claimed, will net the required $346,000 if all taxes are paid, but deduction of the usual 10 per cent delinquency means not more than $308,000 or $310,000.

OHIO RAILROAD RATE WAR NEAR

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—Ohio railroads, apparently, are on the eve of a rate war.

This belief was voiced here today by state officials. They predicted that, if the anticipated slashing of freight rates develops, the results will, in all probability, include a lowering of the cost of living for Ohioans to some extent, at least.

Joint application was filed today with the state utilities commission by the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Lorain & West Virginia Railway companies, for permission to put into effect upon one day's notice, a schedule of reduced freight rates on pig iron shipments. The proposed reductions range from 17 to 30 cents per ton.

Arrests in East Liverpool during 1925 totaled 1,233, according to the annual report of Chief of Police Hugh McDermott, which was submitted today to Safety Director S. B. Anderson.

More than one-third of the offenders—487—were charged with intoxication, while 123 others were held for violation of the liquor enforcement laws. Forty-seven arrests were made on charges of drunkenness and disorderly, while

EVELYN NESBIT THAW DRINKS LYSOL, MAY DIE; SON ARRESTED

"Broadway Butterfly" Found Unconscious in Chicago.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Boy Held When he Refuses to Answer Questions.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, "Broadway butterfly," divorced wife of Harry Thaw, attempted to reach the end of her troubled career here this morning.

She was found unconscious in her apartment at 55 East Walton place after she had drunk eight ounces of lysol.

Her 17-year-old son, Russell Thaw, was taken into custody by police when he point-blank refused to answer questions regarding the attempted suicide of his mother. He and a maiden were working over her frantically when police arrived.

She was taken to the Ashland Boulevard hospital, where at 8 o'clock this morning her chances for recovery were said to be exceedingly slim.

Found by Her Son.

Miss Nesbit has been dancing here at the Moulin Rouge.

Miss Nesbit had just completed her engagement at the cabaret and was to leave tomorrow for the east and Florida.

Early inquiries gave no indication of the cause for this latest attempt of the Broadway belle of 20 years ago to end her life. At the hospital it was said her condition is so critical that it is impossible to question her.

Miss Nesbit was found at 5 o'clock this morning by her son when he and the maid were attracted by groans from her room.

She lay in her night clothing, moaning and unable to speak.

Recovery Doubtful.

Her personal physician, Dr. E. Thomas Brand, was summoned and she was taken at once to the Asland Boulevard hospital run by Dr. Amante.

Alford Relief Fund Boosted to $213 by Two Contributions

Two additional contributions, one for $2 from Mrs. Samuel Breakstone and another for $1 from a "Friend," received by the Review-Tribune today, boosted the Charles Alford family relief fund today to $213.

Reports of contributions collected by John Rice and Arthur Pugh will be made tomorrow.

The Alford family's farm cottage back of Chester was destroyed by fire last week.

$50,000 FUND IS PLACED IN HANDS OF FIVE CITIZENS HERE

R. M. Brookes Chosen Chairman; W. S. Foulks, Secretary

COURT'S ACTION

J. S. Hilbert, D. M. Ogilvie and W. H. Vodrey Other Members.

In compliance with the recent decision of the appellate court of the Ninth judicial district, Common Pleas Judge James G. Moore at Lisbon, yesterday afternoon announced the appointment of five trustees in whose hands the $50,000 balance in the East Liverpool War Chest shall be placed.

Trustees to Furnish Bond

The committee, which was named upon recommendation of the various interests involved in the litigation, includes Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brookes, a World War veteran, who is chairman; Attorney William S. Foulks, past commander and at present adjutant of East Liverpool Post No. 4, American Legion, chosen secretary; James S. Hilbert, real estate and fire insurance dealer and election board official, treasurer; W. H. Vodrey, attorney-at-law, and D. M. Ogilvie, dry goods merchant.

Bond for the trustees of the fund of the board was placed at $10,000, while that of Foulks as secretary at $5,000. The other members of the board will post $1,000 bond each.

The balance in the War Chest, much of which is invested in government bonds, is in the hands of W. E. Dunlap, cashier of the First National bank, and Joseph Betz, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who were made custodians of the fund by a court order pending settlement of the controversy. The money is to be turned over to the permanent board of trustees as soon as the bonds of the trustees are filed.

Two-Year Court Fight.

Disposition of the War Chest balance found its way into the county courts about two years ago, after the War Chest executive board voted to divide the money between the East Liverpool chapter of the American Red Cross for relief work and the City hospital as the nucleus for a building fund.

Local posts of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars were granted injunctions against this Johnson, of Cuyahoga Falls, his father-in-law. They were victims of monoxide gas poison and had been dead apparently for 12 days. They had not been seen since they entered the house on December 23.

They came here to work in the plant of the Empire Steel company. Unloading their furniture they started two gas stoves, turning the gas on full, and went to bed.

Neighbors thought the men had returned to their families but became alarmed when the weather moderated and the stoves were still going full blast.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GOLF EDGAR POE NOVELS WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

FORTY.

The train moved slowly through long lines of freight cars, behind which, towering through the smoke was an assembly of buildings labeled in large white letters, National Axle and Bearing company, and in smaller ones, Central City, Chicago, New York, San Francisco, New Orleans. It emerged into the open again, and a city built upon a hillside was revealed.

"This, Therese," said the tall woman in draw-room "D" of the last car, "is Central City."

Mrs. Mary Farr Harwood's French maid looked out of the window.

"Oui, Ville de la madame!"

"Larger perhaps than you thought it would be?"

"Oui, madame."

The first Mrs. Harwood had been beautiful, and was stately and majestic in appearance. Endowed by nature with strong powers and violent passions, unfortunately she never had learned to employ the one, and to conceal, if not to moderate the other.

In the days when Mrs. Harwood was the reigning hostess of Central City, she was a severe and strict observer of the external forms; her hospitality was splendid, even to ostentation; her address and manners were grave, dignified, and severely regulated by the rules of etiquette. And yet, with all these qualities to excite respect, she was seldom mentioned in the terms of approval and affection. Self-interest seemed too obviously the motive of all her actions; and when this is the case, sharp-judging and malignant women are not easily imposed on by outward show.

Her feelings now, as she saw the ancient union station looming around the curved track, were confused. She had gone away from Central City a broken woman, seeking only to forget. Now after wandering afar amidst new and enervating vistas, she was back, still unable to forget, but not disturbed so much by her memories.

The train stopped with a jerk. Mrs. Harwood wondered who would be waiting for her in the station. She bent down in the aisle and tried to see the faces behind the guard-fence. Possibly even Noble. No! what was she thinking of! Ridiculous! Her eyes closed. Those seconds the passengers were held up while the porter was depositing the hand-luggage upon the platform, were irritatingly long.

At last she faced the open air and saw loved ones. Lilah and Marion. They burst past the guard and ran to meet her. There were tears in her eyes when she stood back a minute later, having kissed both of them with all the feeling of a disturbed soul.

"How awfully well you are looking!" Lilah exclaimed.

"Yes, mother, you look years younger," Marion agreed. She noted her mother's bobbed hair and ultra attire. "Gee, you certainly got fixed up in Paris." If only she had known the hours and hours her mother had spent with hair-dressers, dressmakers, milliners and similar specialists.

"Mother, I'm expecting you to be my guest for a while," Lilah explained, as they walked along, the maid following them uncertainly. "You didn't write and say what your plans were and I—"

"I shall probably take a house," her mother answered. She was uncomfortable in the face of the stares of throngs in the station. It apparently was generally known that Mrs. Noble Harwood the first was returning to Central City.

Marion had not thought it incongruous for her to borrow the Harwood limousine for the occasion, and so the trip to the Lyons home was made in one of Noble's cars, with the maid in front with Henry and mother and daughters behind.

"How is little Mary?" the elder one asked, relieving a silence.

"Just fine, and just dying to see Grandma Harwood. All of her grandparents are 'granpa'."

"How does Central City look to you now, mother?" Marion asked.

"Much the same, much the same." "Awful isn't it, after Paris and London and Rome?"

"The best city is where a mother's children are," was the quiet response, given as she pressed them with the arms she had about their shoulders.

Lilah's eyes were wet; Marion stared uncomfortably out of the window.

"How is your father?"

Lilah, a little shocked because her mother had asked the question, murmured, "Oh, he's all right."

"Is he in the city?"

"Yes, he is busy preparing for the ball that is to be Marion's coming-out affair."

Mrs. Harwood regarded her youngest daughter, "Yes, my baby is growing up."

Marion was disturbed and puzzled. Her mother had never been like this before. The mother of old had not been interested in her children and had wasted few soft words upon them. "I want you to come, mother, please," Marion said, taking the home-comer's hand. Their eyes met.

"Father is sending you an invitation."

"Perhaps I shall." What suppressed agony there was in her voice!

"You have a very pretty maid, mother," Lilah observed, clutching at the first thing she could think of to talk about.

"Yes. She used to be maid-in-waiting to the Countess de Vagrac. Her father was killed in the war. Perfect in every particular. I simply couldn't do without her. . . . Is Ella still—"

"She's Laurel's maid now."

Lilah tried to get her sister's eye; they must, she wanted to flash, avoid referring to their father.

"I am very anxious to meet Laurel," said Mrs. Harwood calmly, "and I hope I shall have an early opportunity."

The two girls glanced at each other apprehensively. Was there something ominous in their mother's words?

NOTED SECESSION DOCUMENT FOUND

Hunted Ordinance Turns Up in Sandusky, Ohio.

Sandusky, Ohio.—South Carolina's ordinance of secession, missing almost from the day of its adoption on December 20, 1860, came to light here.

It is in the temporary possession of Common Pleas Judge William L. Flesinger, who refuses to discuss it except to say that it has been a heirloom in a Sandusky family for some years and that, for the time being at least, he can only admit that he has it.

It has become known here however, that Congressman James T. Begg of this city investigated at Washington and reported that the museums there told him the document now in Judge Flesinger's hands had been long sought but never found.

The congressional library, Begg said, has made repeated requests for the loan or purchase of the ordinance or a photograph copy of it.

After Lincoln was elected the South Carolina legislature called a special session to vote upon secession. The meeting was held in Columbia, S. C., December 17, 1860, but adjourned to Charleston because of a smallpox epidemic in Columbia.

At Charleston the ordinance, declaring "that the union subsisting between South Carolina and other states under the name of the United States of America is hereby dissolved," was framed, approved and signed.

Neatly hand-lettered in one corner of the document is a statement to the effect that it was found in the house of Doctor Lamb, secretary of state, along with other documents by federal officers on March 3, 1865.

The document, which has been referred to as "the cause of the war of the rebellion," is in a remarkably good state of preservation.

That some of the signers were nervous when they signed is evidenced by scrutiny of the approximately 200 signatures on the ordinance.

New Waterway Law.

GULFPORT, Miss., Jan. 5.—Enormous wealth is expected to be added to the value of southern land and industries through the passage of waterway legislation at the present session of congress, according to United States Senator Edwin S. Broussard, of Louisiana, in an address here.

The fine Porto Rican embroidery which is so popular in the United States is done almost entirely by women and children working at home, the industry being fostered by the church and charitable associations.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

The Presidential Hand

President Coolidge shook hands with 3,130 guests at the White House New Year's reception, in observance of the good old American custom. It is probably worth the trouble, for the proud glow it gives the citizens who grasp the presidential hand, and the tradition of democracy that it continues. But it usually leaves the master of the White House with his arm in a sling.

Anyone who thinks that is not a fearsome ordeal should try shaking hands with some friend three of four thousand times in rapid succession. True, there is a technique which eases the strain somewhat. The public man soon learns that it is fatal to let the other fellow get the drop on him, so to speak. So he takes the aggressive, especially with husky males, and gets a firm clinch on the visitor's hand before the visitor can grip his. But while that procedure saves the host's hand from being squeezed to a pulp, it is hard on his contracting muscles.

Yet it must be endured. There is no satisfactory substitute. Rubbing noses in Chinese fashion might be even worse. Imagine the state of President Coolidge's nose after 3,130 rubbings.

A ruler in ancient times was chosen mainly for his strong right arm. We haven't changed much. Shaking hands is friendlier than wielding a battle-axe or sword, but no easier. The boy who aspires to be president should start developing his right arm and hand.

Traveling Through The Ether

Half of the Einstein theory is said to be knocked out by experimental work done by an American scientist, Prof. Dayton C. Miller, of Case School of Applied Science, who has been awarded a $1,000 for his contribution to science.

Einstein based his theorizing on the original experiments of this scientist made 20 years ago with Prof. Norley, of Western Reserve university, which failed to show any "drift" of the ether. His latest observations, made with better equipment, prove conclusively, he says, that there is an ether drift, and shows its extent. This is big news to thinking men.

The main fact proved by Prof. Miller is simply this, which anyone can understand:

The "ether of space" exists, in spite of attempts made to disprove it in recent years. There is some such mysterious substance as philosophers and scientists have long assumed, which fills all space, pervades the whole universe, in which all material things float and move, and which is the carrier of light, electricity and other vibratory forces.

But there a modification of the theory. It used to be said that, if the ether existed, it was "perfectly elastic," so that all moving things passed through it without friction, leaving the ether itself undisturbed. Dr. Miller finds that the ether in its motion through space, and presumably all other material things, drag the ether with them to some extent, as a wire screen sweeping through water drags some of the water.

He proves this by the way our earth's motion through space bends from their straight course light waves from the sun or stars and hastens or retards them according to their direction.

Many conclusions can be drawn, of which these are as interesting as any:

The movement of our solar system through space is far greater than anyone has supposed. The sun has a speed of 12 miles a second with relation to the rest of our universe, but the whole universe itself is moving 120 miles a second.

Whither is it moving, and when will it arrive? Nobody knows that. Will anyone ever know?

Inflated Credit

The annual report of the secretary of the treasury tells the public that "most of the factors underlying the present business situation are apparently sound and warrant optimism for the future." But this assurance is coupled with a warning.

Secretary Mellon refers rather doubtfully to the "tendency for the consuming public to buy every conceivable commodity on time" and hopes that "the speculative tendency in real estate may not proceed to the point of undermining the spirit of caution in business."

These hints are timely. The first particularly deserves attention.

Credit is a mighty valuable and useful institution—so much so that it is a dangerous thing to abuse. It is probably better, on the whole, to do business on a credit basis than a cash basis, because so much more business can be done that way—more goods made and sold and more people kept profitably busy. But there are limits to the usefulness of credit.

Over-inflation of credit among our customers generally, in retail buying as well as in business operation, making very good times for a while, might end suddenly and unexpectedly in bad times, with everybody in the whole.

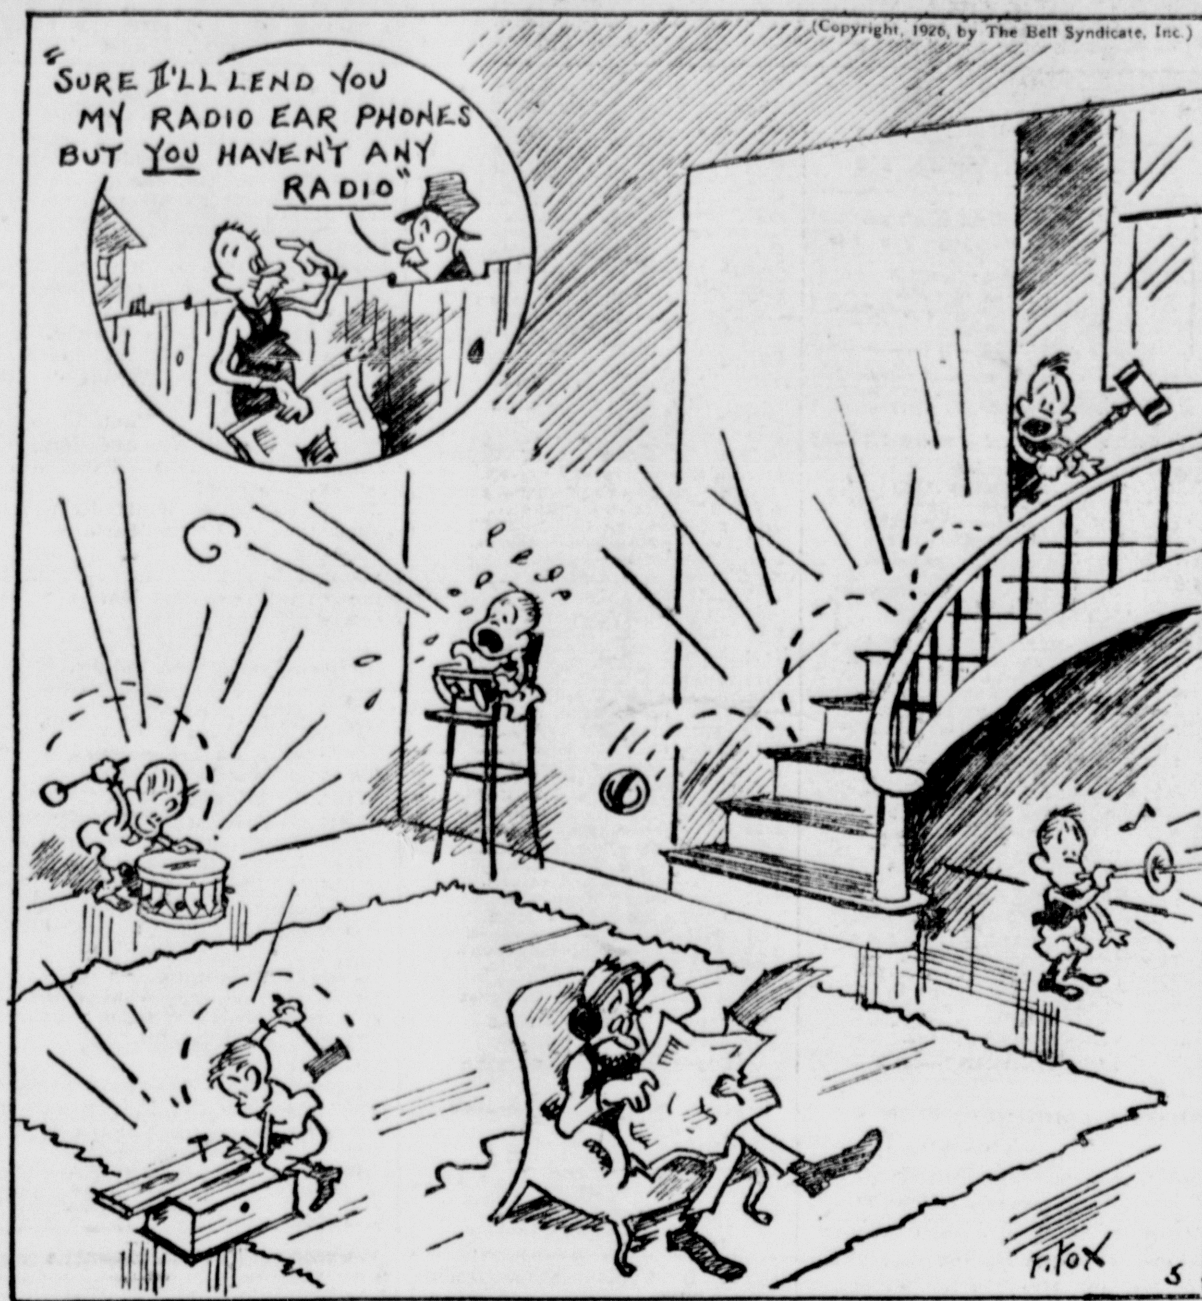

Convicts nowadays come home for the holidays like college boys. But they don't go back.

Women, like automobiles, come out in yearly models. Usually it's an improvement, too.

Delaware is buying Kansas rabbits, alive, to turn loose for hunters. Why not let the hunters move to a rabbit state?

Days are growing longer. Get out and save the daylight.

Incident of The Holidays—

By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Many hotels have enormous suites rented by the year but seldom occupied. Rich men maintain them merely as a convenience when town houses are being renovated or for brief stop-overs between Europe and Florida.

Millionaires in other cities often have reservations by the year so they will not face annoyance of a crowded city upon occasional visits. Some are even manned by personal servants who see their employers at rare intervals but must be on the job constantly.

Two South Americans have had elaborate apartments at uptown hotels for more than three years. One has been used for a ten-day period during that time. This rather astounding extravagance is said to total a revenue of more than a million a year for his hotels.

In a new hotel to be built it is said one seven-room apartment has been leased for 10 years to a very rich widow who has a big town mansion and spends the greater portion of her time abroad. A private elevator to her suite is to be installed. She wants it for private functions.

Col. Edward Green, Hetty's son, keeps eight rooms at the Waldorf for incidental use. Flo Ziegfeld has an apartment at the Ritz. Also town apartment and country place. Then there are hundreds who keep apartments in hotels for convenience during the opera.

As a rule these renters must pay a higher rate than the usual tariff due to the loss the dining rooms suffer from lack of patronage. As a general thing the revenue from food for the steady occupant is about one-third of the amount of the rent. Thus hotels desire steady eating patrons.

The tug of war between Florida and California for New York winter patronage has resulted in many amusing yarns. There is one of the Floridian and Californian going to a convention in a Florida town. They had argued about the respective size and virtues of their states all the way.

beds when the warriors were adjoining. The Floridian secured a large turtle and placed it in his neighbor's bed. When the latter retired his foot touched the turtle. He leaped out, threw back the sheet and yelled: "What in the world is that?"

"One of our Florida bed-bugs," said the Floridian man laconically.

The Californian squinted at it closely again and remarked: "Little son-of-a-gun ain't he?"

Jim Corbett was turning his auto around a Broadway corner to draw up at the Lambs. He forgot to signal traffic back of him and a taxi brushed his car. When Corbett stopped in front of the club, the taxi driver leaned out to bawl him out and recognizing the pugilist said with a snort of disgust: "Hell I thought you knew how to use your hands."

Then there is the story of the ultra-sophisticated New Yorker, Gene Buck, who got caught in the midst of a traffic jam and after jockeying about heard a taxi driver sing out: "How do you like the city, Bub?"

Rea Irvin, the artist, had an Alrdale torn in battle. He took him to a veterinary two miles away for repairs. Again the dog was badly used up in a fight but this time he appeared at the doctor's office unaccompanied and was properly bandaged. The third time the veterinary was out but when he returned the dog was lifeless on his step with a deep gash in his throat. Those who do not know dogs may doubt this. Those who do will merely attribute it to the average intelligence of the ordinary dog.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

America—The Magnet
WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 5.—Mr. Slitherwaite, of the United States, may point with pride or view with alarm, according to his views on isolation—once he takes a look around him to see how this country is dealing with the rest of the planet. He would find in that survey an interesting phenomenon, unparalleled in history, save, perhaps, in a view of Babylon, or Nineveh, or Rome, in their palmiest days. For, to use the language of Mr. Sinclair Lewis, he would find "that over night, without even our selves perceiving it, we are changing from the world's dusty wheatfield to the world's hectic but incomparably fascinating capital." To paraphrase the thought: America is on the verge of absorbing the world.

The American magnet is an instrument of great potency. From the crannies and the broad valleys of civilization the particles of the world's life are yielding to its attraction. Where Babylon and Nineveh, and Rome reached out and brought the world to their shrines, America is resting at ease, and the world is reaching out to touch her. And Mr. Slitherwaite, were he of analytical mind, would find ample evidence of this in his inspection.

For this inspection would include the development of America during the past six years. He would see the Metropolitan Museum and he would see such names as Michael Arlen, M. Dantchenko, George Bernard Shaw, J. Pierpont Morgan, H. R. H. Edwards, prince of Wales, Mundein and Haye Bab, the Passion Players, Noel Coward, Countess Karolyi, the European Debt Commission, M. Caillaux, Bolshevism, Owen D. Young and Charles G. Dawes, the Washington Conference, General Pershing, Rudolph Valentino, and Paavo Nurmi.

In this list he would discover the tremendous attraction of America. He would find that she has drawn to her the attention of the world, and that almost every phase of human endeavor and thought is looking to her. He would find that the arts are being irresistibly attracted, that religion is concentrating on the American field, that politics, finance, economics, sociology, international relations, sports—everything under the sun—is becoming America's province.

Europe comes to her for money; artists come to her to exploit their works; religion pays attention to her tremendous field; she is the greatest market for sports in the world; she is sought in international conferences, and her South American sister republics look to her to settle their disputes.

Indeed, so pronounced is the trend toward America that it led a British statesman to cry out against it no longer ago, likening America to a great cesspool of wealth which is sucking the art and culture of the world into its depths.

The Wealthiest Nation
And wealth, it is true, has the major role in this trend. America today is the world's wealthiest nation. According to estimates given recently her aggregate capital is in the neighborhood of three hundred billions, while the second in line—Great Britain—can muster but a little over a hundred billion as her share.

So the trend is natural, where the money is, everything goes. Where money is there is prosperity and room for new ideas, new artistic developments.

But behind American money is American energy and the genius for adapting things to the best advantage. The American has always been an acquirer. From the beginning of the nation he has been looking out for new things. He bought Louisiana from the French; from Russia he purchased Alaska; from Spain he bought the new booming Florida, and from Denmark he got the Virgin Islands. So striking is this tendency that it led a rather facetious observer to remark recently that the question of today is: "How much of England—indeed of Europe, Asia, and Africa—can the directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks VapoRub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime:—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin (like a poultice or plaster) "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

United States absorb?" The Metropolitan Museum in New York is a typical instance. It does not cover the United States, of course, but it is an epitome of America's program of acquisition. There the 15-tercentury will find that Abberville, in France, has not yielded a mere coat of mail, but an armorer's forge, complete with saint and anvil. Switzerland has furnished a paneled parlor, with a tiled stove, 300 years old.

The Morgan room is filled with souvenirs and snuff boxes of royal France and if a scion of the glorious Bourbons were suddenly to appear he would probably feel more at home than he did among his own countrymen in July 1789.

Even old Egypt has come and laid her treasures at the feet of the Goddess of Liberty. The body of ancient Parnah, embalmed several thousand years ago, has been dug up, the tomb taken apart and packed for shipment, like so much freight, on a steamship and brought to New York where it has been put together and on exhibition for American eyes.

Art Treasures Accumulate
And so it is with almost everything the other hemisphere possesses. If America acquires a hunkering for an art treasure it is certain that one of her millionaires will have it and place it in some American art gallery as a memorial to himself.

There are countless other instances. M. Dantchenko deserted the Moscow theater—if only temporarily—to give New York a treat. Michael Arlen brought over Iris Storm, Mayfair, These Charming People, and The Romantic Lady to visit with Americans.

Rudolph Valentino deserted his native Italy to charm America. Noel Coward came over from London to try his sex plays on New York and George Bernard Shaw has been crowding the American stage with his works. The Bolsheviks sent representatives to convert a prosperous bourgeoisie into a miserable proletariat, and Countess Karolyi knocked at the door in the interest of a certain Hungarian faction.

In more serious vein: Europe has been asking for money in one breath and conferring on how to pay past debts in another. Peru and Chile have asked America to settle their dispute, Dawes and Young fashioned a plan for the economic rehabilitation of Europe. The Prince of Wales displayed extreme enthusiasm over American civilization. Mundein and Hayes were made cardinals with the eyes of the world upon them.

America is attracting the world to her. All roads used to lead to Rome; now they lead to America.

American automobiles are used to overcome the great distances on the vast plains of Australia.

John French Says Thacher's Did It

Florida Man Declares Recovery From Bad Case of Stomach Trouble Is Due Entirely to Celebrated Liver and Blood Syrup.

"If anybody has reason to feel grateful for Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup, I am certainly that man," declared John E. French, a well-known resident of Hawkes Park, Fla. "It has practically made a new man of me."

"Ten years ago my health gave way and I got in a badly run-down condition. My stomach was all out of order and most everything I ate would sour and cause my stomach to burn like fire. I would belch up fluid that was hot as pepper and bitter as gall, and many a time I was bloated till I was tight as a drum."

"I was badly constipated, too, and suffered constantly with dull, heavy headaches, and at times would have awful pains through my body, clear to my back."

"Finally I got some of Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup, and before I had finished my second bottle I had gotten rid of all those troubles. Since then I have always kept this medicine in my home and it has been a stand-by with the whole family—never fails to do the work."

"I've seen Dr. Thacher's great prescription do wonders for other people, too. Why, about four years ago I ran across an old friend who was all run down and in mighty bad shape. He had been doctoring a long time but didn't get any better. I got him to take Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup and two months later I got a letter from his wife saying he was improving fast, and after taking only two bottles was almost well. The last I heard from him he was getting along fine."

Mr. French, like thousands of others, found that his stomach trouble quickly yielded to the strengthening invigorating efforts of Dr. Thacher's Great Liver and Blood Syrup. Anyone can easily obtain this celebrated prescription and if it does not benefit him his money will be refunded. It is sold in East Liverpool by Carahan Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

Good Leather, Too

ANOTHER characteristic feature of Cantilever Shoes which has much to do with their unusual comfort and remarkable durability is one which we seldom have space to mention.

Namely, the high quality of leather used in making them.

But without this they would be neither so comfortable nor so durably smart and even handsome after months of wear.

Good leather without Cantilever constructional features would not give Cantilever comfort.

But good leather and Cantilever Design make an almost perfect combination. We know you will enjoy wearing the

OHIO ASSEMBLY WILL CONVEENE ON JANUARY 15

Leaders Perfect Plans
for One-day Special Session.

DRAFT PROGRAM

Agreement Sought on Financial Relief for Districts.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 4. — Legislative leaders today are perfecting plans for the one-day special session of the Ohio legislature to be held here starting at 9 a. m. January 15. Copies of the formal call for the session were being mailed to legislators today.

At a caucus of legislators, to which Democrats as well as Republicans, have been invited, scheduled to be held here at 5 p. m. January 14, efforts will be made to reach an agreement to limit the special session to the introduction and passage of an emergency act giving immediate relief to financially distressed municipalities, counties and other local taxing districts.

The financial relief act will be introduced by Representative W. E. Baxter, Allen county. It was drafted by Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, acting speaker and Republican floor leader in the house.

The bill, which is being printed for distribution among legislators and other interested Ohio taxpayers, provides three methods whereby financial relief may be obtained by local taxing districts. One method provides that counties, whose rate limits are absorbed by interest and sinking fund charges, may, by majority petition of the voters, remove tax levies from the limit sufficient to permit the making of levies for operating expenses. This method, it was stated, would eliminate the acute financial situation in Allen county.

Another method would authorize taxing officials to make levies over a period of years in order to liquidate unpaid bills. The third method provides for issuance of refunding notes maturing within the five-year period ending December 31, 1931.

The Baxter bill, according to Taft, would take care of Attorney General Crabbe's request for legislation enabling 16 counties to pay the state approximately $500,000 alleged due for care and maintenance of dependent wards.

A public hearing on the bill is to be held at a joint session of the senate and house tax committees, in the house chamber at 11 a. m., January 8.

Scott Hunt Ends

lent the story was that a few years before Russell Scott, for all his youth, had been a financial wizard in Canada and the promoter of a $30,000,000 project which had fallen through.

Eventually he came before a judge, pleaded guilty to murder and threw himself upon the mercy of the court expecting the usual prison sentence in such cases. Instead, he was sentenced to hang.

A horrified attorney threw himself upon his knees before the bar and, with tears streaming down his face, pleaded that the sentence be set aside, the plea of guilty withdrawn and a trial by a jury granted.

He got it and Scott again was sentenced to death.

Still an every-day criminal case. But the loyalty and devotion of two persons—the fragile little wife whom Scott had deserted and his crippled, grey-haired father—had fired a train of emotions that were to run a long gamut.

Petitions for Commutation. In Ontario province, Canada, where Scott had been known only as a man of wealth and of a good record, the effort to save him began and spread like wildfire to various parts of the United States. In Canada, benefit entertainments were staged to raise funds to appeal his case. In Detroit, club women interested themselves in his behalf. In other parts of the country, petitions for a commutation were circulated and descended upon Governor Len Small of Illinois in an avalanche.

Although there was only his word for it and the law makes no distinction between the actual slayer and an accomplice, Scott's story that it was his brother who had killed Maurer started a search for Robert that he believed would bring about the desired commutation.

Three times, while all these frenzied efforts in his behalf were being made, Russell Scott was brought within a few hours of the gallows.

Jury Saves Russell Scott. Three times he escaped it. Twice the governor gave him a reprieve that his case might be reviewed by higher courts; the third time a judge was held from his bed in the early hours before dawn to halt, by means of a law, the execution at almost the very moment it was timed to begin.

That law, dusted off but once before in the half century it had been in existence, provided no alternative but a jury trial of Scott's sanity.

That jury saved him definitely. It found him insane and he went to the asylum, blithely waving his hand at the crowds that besieged the train upon which he departed and sneering openly at the sentimentalities which were being showered upon him.

Since then, interest in him died down and even the search for his brother had become only a matter of police routine, which now threatens to be upset again by the identification of "Redding" as the much wanted man.

Garbage Collector Makes More Money Than Church Pastor

Evangelist Lincome
Says Church Keeps Her Workmen Nearer Hunger Point Than Industrial Organizations

Rev. F. Lincome, evangelist of Gary, Ind., spoke to another large audience last night in the Oakland Free Methodist church where he is conducting a series of meetings.

"The church," he said, "is the richest organization in the world—richer than the Standard Oil company or the United States Steel corporation, yet in spite of her influence she keeps her workmen nearer the hunger point than any industrial organization. A garbage collector makes more money in this country than the average preacher."

"An addition to the church should mean a subtraction from the world. One should not be content in both places. The ideal type of Christianity is the happy blending of righteousness, peace and joy, a rising element of the Holy Spirit."

"Holiness is a trinity and consists of theory, experience and practice. Theoretical holiness has to do with the head. Experimental holiness has to do with the heart and practical holiness has to do with the hand."

Evangelist Lincome will speak at the noon hour tomorrow in the Laughlin plant, East End.

When the order came, he protested, as his wife had said, as the records prove. The records also prove that his protest was overruled, his advice was rejected, with an indorsement to the effect that certain facts were to be held on fixed dates, therefore he must make the trip as scheduled.

The order caused his death, and that of the good men that died with him.

The Shenandoah report is a shameless whitewashing job, as everybody expected it would be, disgraceful to the navy and to the administration, and that is that.

Cowards that stupidly risked the lives of other men, prove to be the sort of cowards that dodge responsibility.

Dealing with money is a clean, steady, regular business. Someone always needs it and is willing to pay for it. George F. Baker, dean of great American bankers and head of New York's First National bank, announces profits of more than sixteen million dollars for the year, dividends at the rate of 100 per cent, nice round numbers.

Not so long ago that bank was too poor to join in the clearing house. Now it has resources of five hundred millions. And Mr. Mitchell's bigger bank, the National City bank, has twice as much as the First National.

Only a few centuries back, taking interest on money, at no matter what rate, was pronounced a mortal sin by the Christian church everywhere.

Fortunately for the bankers, opinions have changed.

Dr. Dayton C. Miller wins the $1,000 prize of the American Association for the Advancement of Science with his essay on "The Michelson-Morley ether drift experiment." Dr. Miller's experiments at the Mount Wilson observatory will cause Einstein to revise his theories on relativity, so say the scientists.

The average man does not even know what the ether drift is, except that it interferes with space stars having an absolute motion, as regards each other, and a much greater, more rapid movement through the ether.

In fact, the greatest scientist cannot tell you what the ether is, or even prove that it exists, except as an indispensable hypothesis. In science, buff when they deal with infinite men are children playing blindman's space.

England is still much annoyed, justly, because we make such a fuss about the British rubber monopoly. This rich nation should not whine if another makes money. We ought to plant our own rubber trees, or, better, find a substitute for rubber trees. It is bound to come. Why not now?

The strangest story of last year is that of Mrs. Eliza Nussbaum, 58 years old and a grandmother. She confesses that she plotted with four others to kill her husband, older than herself, because she wanted to marry another man.

Mrs. Nussbaum's excuse is that in 44 years of married life her husband's only kind act was that once he bought her some ice cream.

The other man, it seemed, loved her and waited 14 years for the husband to die. They thought that was long enough, so they killed him.

Mr. Hoover's agents in Moscow have discovered letters written by Catherine of Russia to Franklin, Paul Jones and others. They were romantic letters, and Mr. Hoover is not sure that they should be given to a pure-minded prohibition police, especially the letters to Paul Jones.

The censor should read some of the Catherine's other letters, and the story of her life, and her plain, straightforward method, when she took a fancy to a man. She was very direct.

"What's Your Hurry Company" is Playing At Strand Theatre

East Liverpool theatre-goers have a real treat in store for them this week when the musical comedy offering of the "What's Your Hurry Company," playing at the Strand theatre.

The company is headed by Bud Brownie, who is a show himself. He is assisted by a half score of other principals and a chorus of girls, who know how to sing and dance.

For the first half of the week the company is presenting a riot of fun, "The Bell Boy." The show is one big laugh from start to finish. Features are Jack Noff, lyric tenor; the Atlantic City trio in a series of vocal selections and a pair of saxophonists, who offer a specialty number.

The chorus is made up of a galaxy of beauty and affords a charming comeliness for the leads. The scenic effects and costumes complete an offering that measures up well with other shows which have been seen here this season.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—A reactionary tone prevailed in the stock market in the early trading today, and industrial stocks in every major group were offered in good volume at concessions from Monday's closing price levels.

Considerable interest was displayed in the new class A stock of the National Cash Register company, distributed in the amount of 1,100,000 shares by the Dillon-Reed banking house at $50 a share. The first price for the new stock was $52, after which it advanced with pool support to $54 and returned to $52, where trading was quite lively. The stock pays $3 a share annually and earnings last year are understood to be at the rate of about $7 a share on both classes of stock.

With the exception of a few of the specialty stocks and rails, the trend of the market was downward, though losses seldom exceeded a point or two and offerings were well absorbed. St. Louis Southwestern common continued its forward movement in the railroads, and International and International Combustion Engineering in the specialties and General Electric in the high priced industrials. Higher prices were also quoted for Atchison, Continental Can and Woolworth.

Part-American Western was the weak spot in the independent oils, with selling due to the reversal of the federal district court's decision in the Elk basin suit between the government and Mr. Doherty. The stock dropped 4 points to 41½ in light trading.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

Rongetti, who attained some notoriety by his connection with the Billy McClintock case last year.

"Her recovery is doubtful," said Dr. Rongetti. "There is no chance that the taking of the poison was accidental. No one could drink eight ounces of lye accidentally."

Gussie Accore, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Nesbit's maid, and her mistress had been drinking a great deal. "Sunday she went to a party with some friends and came back about 5 o'clock yesterday morning quite intoxicated and with a broken nose," she said.

"She went to bed but didn't stay there, but kept getting up and wandering about the place and calling for beer. She drank eight bottles last night and then became angry because there was no more."

"Then she went to the bath room and I followed her. She broke a glass and while I was picking up the pieces she got the bottle of lye. I didn't think about it being poison until she began to scream."

"Oh, Gussie," she said. "I did it. I took poison. I've killed myself."

Then I called her doctor after awakening her son, who slept in a nearby room.

Miss Accore said that when Miss Nesbit left Atlantic City about Thanksgiving time she had just returned from a sanitarium for drug addicts.

"She seemed to be cured," the maid added.

Miss Nesbit, she said, had been talking of a return to Florida and seemed worried throughout her stay in Chicago.

Friends Surprised.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 5.—Friends of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw expressed surprise today over the news that she had tried to commit suicide in Chicago. When she left here in late October, at the end of the summer season in the cabarets, she was reported in good health and well-to-do financially.

When she came to Atlantic City to make her home three years ago her health was poor. Finally, she recuperated, and went into the cabaret business where she displayed ability as a singer and as an owner. At various times she managed several cabarets and night clubs. She is also reported to have made considerable money in the real estate business.

Last summer it was reported that her former husband, Harry K. Thaw, was coming to Atlantic City to provide for her and her son, Russell. Thaw's lawyer wrote to her and she made arrangements to buy a $40,000 home on the strength of the communication. The story was given publication and Thaw decided not to come. Just before she went to Chicago she had planned to sing in Florida.

tion, asked that the money be placed in the care of two trustees pending a court decision.

Several months later Judge Carl H. Smith, of Steubenville, presiding in common pleas court, handed down a decision, ordering that the fund be kept intact and the interest be used for the relief of disabled and distressed veterans of the World War. A committee of five, consisting of Attorneys Brooks, Foulke, and Volney and Messrs. Hilbert and Ogilvie were named the trustees of the fund.

Court's Decision.

Attorney R. G. Thompson, counsel for the hospital board and the Red Cross, carried the case to the court of appeals, which heard the dispute last fall. This court, last month, ruled the fund should be administered by five trustees to be appointed by the common pleas court. The trustees, by the court's order, are authorized to use the money for all wars. In case the money for a memorial, dedicated to no memorial is erected the fund is to be used solely for World war veterans as the board may direct.

Upon consent of the veterans' posts and other organizations involved in the suit, the trustees named several months ago under the ruling of common pleas court, were appointed in conformity with the decision of the court of appeals.

JAZZ COMPOSER CLAUDE MACKAY GIRL AS BRIDE

Irving Berlin Weds
Pretty Heiress to $30,000,000.

"HAPPY," THEY SAY

Despite Wealth, They
Ride to Wedding in Subway.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Irving Berlin, famous composer of jazz music, and his bride, who was Miss Ellen Mackay, daughter of Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company, were honeymooning today—but where, none of their friends could say. The couple, after a few hurried words to reporters, in which they said they were "so happy," dashed away in their automobile.

They have planned an extended European trip, it was learned, and have made arrangements to sail on the Leviathan next Saturday.

Reports were current this morning that they were en route to the Adirondacks, and also that they were on their way to Florida, but most of their close friends believe they are right here in New York.

Society is Surprised.

Society was pleasantly surprised, although somewhat stunned by the sudden marriage, while Broadway, which knows and admires Berlin, a poor boy who came up from the East Side to fame and riches, smiled and applauded.

The bride's millionaire father had nothing to add to his first brief comment that the marriage was "without my knowledge or approval."

The bride is a Roman Catholic and Berlin is a Jew. He is 37, she is 22.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, wife of a noted surgeon, had been reported as desiring her daughter to follow the dictates of her heart in the romance, but today she declined to say whether she approved or disapproved.

Berlin denied that any dispensation had been sought from the Catholic authorities at Rome for the wedding. It was reported last June that a request had been made to Pope Pius, endorsed by Cardinal Hayes, of New York, for sanction of their marriage.

Defies Wrath of Father.

The couple were married yesterday afternoon in the municipal building by Deputy City Clerk James J. McCormick in the presence of a few witnesses. The couple, both wealthy, rode to the municipal building in the subway.

Miss Mackay is heiress to a fortune of $30,000,000. Berlin's individual fortune exceeds $1,000,000.

In marrying Berlin, Miss Mackay defied the wrath of her wealthy father who for two years has fought, with every means at his disposal to break up the match. Ellen yesterday agreed over the telephone to marry the former most exponent of modern jazz immediately. Witnesses were summoned hastily and they were married.

After telephoning the news to friends, Berlin and his bride taxied to his apartment to await the arrival of Miss Mackay's maid with her clothes. After a wait, in which they were besieged by reporters, they drove off, refusing to disclose their destination.

Berlin Former Bowery Singer.

"We are married and we are very happy. That's all we care to say," they told reporters.

A reporter asked Miss Mackay if she had told her father.

"No," she replied, after a moment's hesitation.

Berlin, whose name originally was Isidore Baline, is the son of an immigrant rabbi who certified kosher meals in an east side butcher shop in the days when "Ritz" peddled papers, a writer in "Nigger Mike," a rendezvous in the old Bowery, where he used to sing. His songs made a hit, and he was induced by friends to write others. He did, and became internationally famous.

The bride is Clarence Mackay's second daughter. She is a product of the most exclusive girl's schools and well-known and popular in the most exclusive circles.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our sincere thanks for the kindness, sympathy and assistance tendered us during the recent illness and death of our son, William.

Especially do we thank Mr. Plum and others for their comforting words to us in our bereavement, the singing in the home of our dear son, and those who contributed the use of their cars and the beautiful floral offerings.

He is sadly missed but we mourn not as those having no hope. Our loss is his eternal gain.

Board Re-organizes.

The board has not discussed any solution of the financial dilemma, but the admission that "something must be done" was made last night. Electors of the district voted a three-mile levy for a period of five years at the general election last fall, and they may be asked to approve another levy of two mills.

The board re-organized last night by re-electing D. F. White, president, and F. T. Weaver, vice-president. After the election, White thanked other members of the board for the honor.

R. B. Stevenson, building contractor, and C. A. Ferguson, third street grocer, were sworn in. Stevenson declared that he realized that to be a school board member was a "real man's job" and expressed a willingness "to do my little part" in making the schools a success.

Ferguson said a "big responsibility" rests upon the shoulders

Tells How Cuticura
Healed Skin Trouble

"I was troubled with a breaking out on my face and hands. It itched and burned so that at night I would lie awake for hours and scratch. Scratching caused eruptions that disfigured my face. I could not do my work on account of the breaking out on my hands. The trouble lasted about a month. I used other remedies but none of them seemed to be of any use. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." FIELD'S SHOW
CAST ALL-STAR

Bert Swor, Jack Richards and Others
Here Thursday.

Bert Swor, America's premier black-face comedian, is starred in the new 39th annual edition of the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which open their engagement at the Ceramic theater Thursday.

Jack Richards and Billy Church, America's sweetest singers, are the featured tenors of the production. And the entire cast is one of unusual talent and ability.

Bert Swor returns to the Field organization after several seasons in vaudeville, and his brand of comedy is one that you won't soon forget. His ability as a comedian has earned for him the reputation of being the most popular black-face comedian on the stage today. His style is inimitable and unique, and his comedy is of the best. Associated with him are Harry Frankel, Jack Kennedy, Johnny Healy and Joe McGee, all comedians of the first rank.

have made many ballads and songs Jack Richards and Billy Church popular throughout the country through their careers with the Field Minstrels. Both have tenor voices of pure bell-like quality, and their numbers alone and separately, have come to be the featured and looked forward to part of the minstrel show. Jack Richards has presented "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," for so many years that he is afraid that his patrons and friends will have tired long since of hearing it. So this year he has decided to leave it out of his repertoire unless the public demands to hear it.

Billy and Leo Moran head the dancing chorus and will offer a most unique program of dancing.

Quick Way to Stop
Night Coughing

New Method Is Remarkably Effective

No need to put up with that distressing, weakening, sleep-robbing night cough another night. For there is a simple but very effective treatment which, usually with a single dose, stops all irritation and lets you sleep soundly the whole night through.

This treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful at night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of night coughing. So the coughing stops quickly and you sleep all night undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

Left arm sprained and ligaments torn

FELL FROM TOP OF BOX CAR

Sustains painful injury but gets quick relief

Men who handle big hazardous jobs demand quick, effective help for sprains, strains, lame backs and bruises.

A freight brakeman on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway fell off the top of a box car on his left arm, spraining it and tearing the ligaments loose.

"I suffered great pain," he writes. "Then I got a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and it relieved the pain right away. I have now no pain to speak of at all. The swelling has nearly all gone down." (Name and address given on request.)

What is the magic of this amazingly effective remedy? Sloan's sends an increased supply of healing blood right to the spot that hurts. That's what conquers the pain. No need to rub. Sloan's does the whole job. Just pat it on. Quickly and surely, it kills pain, reduces swelling and inflammation, drives out stiffness from lame muscles. Get a bottle. All druggists—35 cents.

LASTING PEACE DUBLIN'S HOPE IN NEW TREATY

Ulster, as Well as Free State, Ends Border Dispute.

PROGRESS LOOMS

Cosgrove's Government Faces Precarious Situation.

DUBLIN — All Ireland, the North as well as the Free State, hopes for lasting peace as a result of the tripartite agreement reached with the British government in London.

President Cosgrove earnestly believes that peace will be the outcome of the dropping of the boundary line dispute with Ulster, but his hopes are not shared by other politicians of the Free State, and there is apparently no prospect at the moment of the cessation of the internecine quarrels which have characterized Irish politics for generations.

Emmon de Valera, leader of the Republicans, whose remaining outside the Dail with his followers, has found in the London agreement an issue on which he may renew his attacks on the Free State government, while inside the Dail, the Labor party, backed by some members of the Government party, propose to carry on their fight against the pact even to the extent of appealing to the courts to set aside the new pact. De Valera is under constant surveillance by the Free State police and his quarters and private papers have been searched, but no official action has been taken against him.

Cabinet Faces Fight.

President Cosgrove is still able to command a majority in the Dail, thus assuring his tenure of office, but on all sides it is admitted that his situation and that of his government is precarious.

Leading the fight against Cosgrove in the Dail is Thomas Johnson, leader of the Labor party, who was among those who demanded a referendum on the London pact.

Johnson is outspoken in his demands for the resignation of the Cosgrove ministry. Asked by International News Service to comment on the present situation, Johnson said: "I think the government ought to resign. The present ministry had no mandate from the people to partition the country. In fact that main appeal to the people when they went forward for election in 1922 was that they alone would be capable of bringing partition to an end. They were to secure such large slices of Six County territory that the rest of the North would have to come into the Free State."

Craig Hopes for Peace.

"I sincerely hope that there will be peace in Ireland, but I notice that Sir James Craig is retaining part of his special constables, a political armed force which exists mainly to repress political activities which he fears may become 'seditions.' These constables are hated by the Nationalists and they are sure to perpetuate antagonisms. Back of these is the semi-military force, the Royal Ulster constabulary, and behind these again a British army of undivided strength encamped in the Six Counties."

"In the Free State there is an army of 15,000 men costing three million pounds ($15,000,000) per annum, and a police force, the civic guards, of close on 10,000 men. Admittedly these forces in themselves would be of little use in repelling an invasion from outside and their raison d'être lies in being ready to repress possible armed rising either in the Free State or in Ulster. This does not suggest peace—it is a state of affairs that will not make for the stability of the country so badly needs."

Election Talked Of.

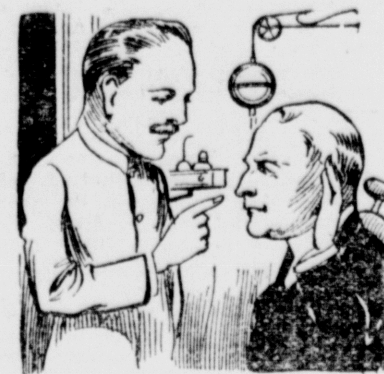

Johnson said he was not certain that a general election would be possible, and even so, did not anticipate that the Labor party could muster enough strength in the dail to take office. In political circles, however, it is being suggested that a coalition between the Labor party and the Republicans is not impossible.

Concerning these reports, Johnson said: "The Labor party will co-operate with any party which honestly endeavors to put into action the Democratic program of the first dail. To my mind the new cleavage will be between those who try to conform policy and program to the ideas prevailing in the north and those who think that Ireland's future lies along the Irish-Ireland lines. I should say that politically the future is with the latter."

A British association has been formed in Slani to support British commercial and general interests in that country.

TRUSTEES HOLD INITIAL MEET

Arrangements Made to Take Over Money
Under Green Law.

Madison township trustees elected last November held their first meeting in the West Point Grange hall last Saturday and organized. The board is composed of William Travis, George M. Eells and Thomas Harvey. Roy M. Gilmore is clerk-treasurer of the township.

The trustees appeared before the county commissioners this week to arrange to take over the appropriation of $1,000 under the Green road law for the improvement of their No. 1 secondary highway system, which is that road extending from the Brick church on the Wellsville-Salmonville road west to connect with the Wellsville-Salmonville road in Yellow Creek township. About one and one-half miles of this road is in Yellow Creek township, and those trustees propose to improve that highway at the same time the work is being done in Madison township.

By this improvement, it will not be necessary for south traffic to enter Wellsville in order to get onto the Wellsville-Salmonville road as a "near-cut" road will be possible.

Trustees of both townships propose to start work on this cross country road as soon as the weather permits. Each township is to receive $1,000 from the state for a mile of the road, and the property fronting the road can be assessed under this law up to $2,000 per mile, thereby creating a fund of $2,000 per mile for improved road purposes.

Twice Pitt tied the score, but each time the Ohioans found little difficulty in regaining the lead at will.

In the last period, State outplayed Pitt in every department of the game.

Whitey Bell, a former Erie, Pa., boy, caged eight field goals for the visitors.

Pro Golf Stars Face Busy Month

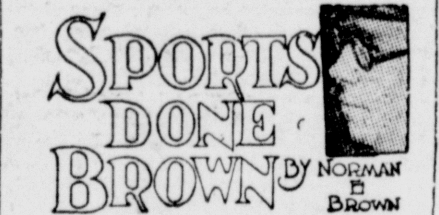

Attractive Purses Hung up for Cash Performers.

Professional golfers will occupy a big share of the sports limelight during the month of January. A lot of real money has been hung up for the cash performers.

Long Beach, Cal., awarded prizes of $2,000 in tournament play January 3 and 4, prior to the California open January 7-9 at Los Angeles, with various purses aggregating $10,000.

The scene then shifts to San Antonio for the Texas open, January 14-16, worth $6,000. A similar amount will be awarded at the Dallas open, Jan. 21-23.

February will be ushered in with the Hot Springs open, with $7,000 prize money.

The honorable order of the sons of the Emerald Isle, being collected by Joseph McCarthy, pilot of the Chicago Cubs, has lately been swelled by the admittance to membership of Mr. Michael Doolan.

Mr. Doolan's presence is required, due to the activities of the Cub leaders in rounding up young shortstops.

Doolan, once one of the sweetest shortstops in the game—and the most graceful—is counted on to teach these newcomers the fine points of covering the territory between second and third and the pitcher's box and short left field, as a good shortstop should do.

Doolan won his place in the hall of fame as a member of the Philadelphia National league club. He was with that club when the Federal league was organized and was persuaded to jump to the Baltimore club of the outlaw organization.

When peace was declared Doolan was awarded to the Chicago Cubs in the general distribution of players and saw service with that club in 1916.

However, his days were about over and after playing with the Giants and Dodgers for a time he left the big show and became interested in the game from the coaching and scouting angles, spending most of his time with the Syracuse and Baltimore clubs.

Doolan's name on the Cub roster will be listed along with such good names as Cooney, Kelly, Fitzgerald, Shannon, Burke, O'Doul and Hartnett. But the uniforms will be gray and white, as usual.

Speaking of shortstops, we would like to hear from the major portion of the American and National league clubs as to why, during their mad scrambles to get infielders, they permitted the Cincinnati Reds to send Jimmy Caveney to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league.

Now the report was prevalent last season that Jimmy's legs were a bit weak. If this be the only reason it is a thin one. Given the choice between a weak pair of legs and a weak brain the average manager will take the weak-legged one for a shortstop.

The Reds certainly didn't let Caveney go because of his age. For the man they got in exchange—Frank Emmer—was Jimmy's age.

Emmer's advantage over Caveney, on paper at least, is his hitting ability. But that ability is gauged only by his work on the coast. He had a trial with the Reds in 1916 and has been a major leaguer ever since.

The Pirates have Glenn Wright, one of the greatest shortstops the game has produced in its years. The Giants have the brilliant Travis Jackson. The Cleveland club has Joe Sewell. Connie Mack has Dykes, Gallagher and Hale and a couple of other good men. But the other clubs are weak in the shortstopping department.

And the interesting part of it is that the Cincinnati Reds have Sam Robins, who stacks up as better than the average shortstop, so why toss out Caveney to get simply another shortstop "hopey"?

Kobe is the largest tourist port in Japan.

WILLS-LENGLEN MEETING NOT FAR OFF

AMERICAN STAR READY TO SAIL

Hopes She Can Play French Champion Several Times.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—What, to the casual eye, seemed to be a taller and, perhaps, a more robust Helen Wills than the east had previously known appeared today to take her final workout in America on the eve of her departure for abroad and the Suzanne Lenglen match, for which all the world has waited these several years. No one seemed prepared to venture whether the additional inch or so meant less speed or more endurance or neither or both.

It merely was there, to be noted for what it might be worth, if anything.

Miss Wills herself was singularly uncommunicative although courteous as always. The writer neglected to ask her whether she liked spinach with her ice cream but it mattered not. She would have answered "yes" or "no," according to her conscience.

"I'm going abroad on a pleasure trip," she said by way of dismissing herself from further consideration. "If I can win tennis matches, the pleasure will be greater. If I can't I won't let it spoil my trip."

On the subject of Suzanne she would not betray more than polite interest by so much as a word, a look or a gesture, although she did say she hoped to meet the French champion not once but several times. She said she thought a series of three matches would better determine the question of supremacy but added with a smile: "I could tell you more about that after the first match."

It is to this opening clash, by the way, that those close to the American claim she looks forward with the highest hope. It will take place on the hard courts of the Riviera, if Suzanne doesn't get housemaid's knee or something in the meantime, and critics of tennis form are agreed that Helen is at her best on this type of playing surface.

Asked about it today, she evaded a direct reply, merely stating that she was more accustomed to hard courts because of her play in California. However, tennis critics claim that she is faster about on clay or asphalt than she is on the turf.

It will be turf at Wimbledon and the heaviest kind, at that. But Helen thinks she will do much better there this year than she did in 1924.

Lacked Practice Last Year. "I only had a few weeks practice in England last time," she said. "This year I plan to be on the ground almost two months in advance of the championship and, if I can't win, I will simply know that it isn't in me."

Her remaining plans were vague, except that she was certain she would return early in July to get ready for the defense of her American title. The tentative schedule mapped out calls for a brief workout at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, this afternoon, her first attempt to play on indoor courts; then the business of sailing tomorrow on the De Grasse, which is due to arrive at Havre on January 15, after which she will spend a few days in Paris and proceed to Cannes.

She said she didn't know what tournaments she would enter there but hoped to play constantly. Then she bowed herself out.

RISKO-FITZ PUT ON TAME BOUT

Cleveland Wins Over Son of Famous Fighter.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—Coming as an anti-climax after an unusually good boxing card at Public hall last night, Johnny Risko, Cleveland's heavyweight, hope, and young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of one of the most famous fighters of all time, put on an extremely tame exhibition, the winner, according to Referee Matt Hinkle, being Risko. The decision, however, was not a popular one.

Johnny Datto, Filipino, scored a technical knockout over Tommy Noble in the sixth round of the semi-final, the referee stopping the fight when it was apparent Noble could not go on.

Tony Getebanau, of Buffalo, fighting at 188 pounds, gave the fans a surprise by scoring a draw with Bud Gorman, weight, 199, a highly touted New Yorker.

He's Anxious to Win British Open So Studies Those Who've Been Hogging Title

A small army of British golfers, pro and am (meaning amateur), have had high hopes the last few years of joining the ranks of Braid, Vardon, Taylor and the other illustrious ones who have won the British open title in the past. The main obstacle in the paths of these new hopefuls, it seems, has been the American golfers, who by their very act in winning the coveted British event four out of five years have kept the jolly Brits from so doing.

Now comes to the United States one of these fabled British gentlemen with his golf clubs and an idea.

That idea is that the best way of learning how to turn back the American threat in next year's British open is to spend most of the time between now and next summer learning how to play the American's game.

That gentleman is Arthur Compston, holder of the British professional championship, the man who came closest to nosing out Long Jim Barnes in the open last year, and the man, who almost captured the French open championship of 1925, the second-most coveted event in European golf circles.

Compston has come to this country for an extended tour with Arnold Massey, winner of the French open last summer, and recognized as one of the few outstanding players of the continent today. The tour will throw them against such opponents as Bobby Jones, Jim Barnes, Johnny Farrell, and a dozen or more outstanding figures in American golf.

Gets Taste of U. S. Fire. Compston's first match, that of him and Massey against Jones and Watts, "fun, future great and Jones' pupil, has already given Compston a good chance to study the style of the great tournament player in the game today, Bobby Jones. In Gunn, Compston found the dash and fire young American tourney players take into their game. Great Britain takes its golf calmly. Patience is the watchword among the younger set. This dash, confident style of U. S. youths like Gunn must be interesting to Compston, a newcomer to this country.

Compston meets Barnes under conditions which give the former a better opportunity to study the Long one's game—a steady, deadly, stroke eating pace that carried him through the open title last summer, after Jack Hutchison and Walter Hagen, between them, had hogged it three out of four years.

As a matter of fact it was Compston's desire to win the British open next season that caused him at first to turn down the offer of invitation of D. P. Davis, Florida millionaire developer, to journey to the U. S. for a tour.

Compston planned to devote all his attention this winter to perfecting his game, to the end he might win back for England the open crown next season. Then he planned to come to the U. S. in quest of more laurels. Then came his thought that the trip might be a means toward the end and he came.

Compston has been called the "white hope" of British golf. Perhaps his huge size has something to do with this sobriquet, although the quality of his golf also suggests it. Compston is a veritable giant in stature, well proportioned and (for feminine note) good looking.

SYRACUSE GETS CIRCUIT STAKE

Outbids Two Rivals for $70,000 Purse Event.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—The most important action at yesterday's grand circuit meeting here was the award of the new $70,000 Hambletonian stake race for three-year-old trotters, to the New York State fair, at Syracuse. The New York organization outbid Atlanta and Kalamazoo, offering $8,000 for the event. The prize will be provided by entry fees.

Whether or not a meeting will be held at Milwaukee this year appeared problematical today, the Milwaukee organization having asked for dates during the week of August 30, for which Syracuse had put in a prior bid. Unless Milwaukee will accept other dates it seemed likely that no grand circuit meeting would be held there this year.

Atlanta has not asked for dates, but it was expected that at least one week's racing would take place there.

COLUMBIANA, Jan. 5.—Columbiana's two independent basketball teams broke even in two fast games. The Central Markets at Salem defeated the Salem Tires, 30-22, a team captained by Charles Reinher, old C. H. S. star. The Tires are leading the City league and are contenders for the city championship. Burkle for the Central Markets made 16 of his team's points. Leo Harold played in Benninghoff's place.

At the Columbiana high school auditorium the Miller Bros. team met defeat at the hands of Jack Art Jewelers of Canton, probably the fastest team that ever appeared on this floor, the score being 46-33. The passing of the visitors was the best seen here in years and their superior team work was too much for the inexperienced local team. Hawkins, usually a star, was so closely guarded that he could only make two baskets, while Thomas was held to the same number.

Youngstown Fans Indicate Preference for Headliners.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5.—Youngstown boxing fans in 1925 were not so keen about their favorite pastime as they were in 1924, according to figures announced by Matchmaker Al Zilli. Twenty bouts in 1925 brought a gross of $62,391, nearly $10,000 less than the 1924 figures.

Such bouts as Jimmy Jones-Willie Harmon, Frankie Genaro-Eddie O'Dowd, Jock Malone-Dick Evans, Al Corbett-Rosey Stoy offered evidence that the fans patronized the sport to better advantage when boys in the upper rows of 12th circles were given the preference over principals striving for recognition.

Jones and Harmon attracted the most customers and the largest receipts, which totalled $5,777.

The leading fielding catcher, however, is Frank Snyder of New York, with a percentage of .985 in 96 games. Charles Hartnett, Chicago, had the most putouts, 409, most assists, 114, most errors, 23, most total chances, 546, and tied with Earl Smith, Pittsburgh, for taking part in the most double plays, 15 each. James Wilson, Philadelphia; Eugene Hargrave, Cincinnati; Earl Smith, Pittsburgh; and James Taylor, Brooklyn, are in a tie for the most passed balls.

Sixteen pitchers returned perfect averages in their fielding efforts. The honor of leading fielding pitcher belongs to Clarence Mitchell, by virtue of his having accepted the most chances, 75, without error. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, had the most putouts, 18, most assists, 62, most total chances, 117, engaged in the most double plays, 11, and with Adolfo Lague, Cincinnati, tied for the most errors, 7 each.

STATE CAGERS DEFEAT PITT

Whitey Bell Hoops Ball Eight Times for Buckeyes.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—Ohio State's Western conference championship basketball team had a 47-34 victory over the Pitt cagers to its credit today through the flashy floor work of Ham and Bell to amass field goals.

Dempsey and the ability of Cunningham.

Twice Pitt tied the score, but each time the Ohioans found little difficulty in regaining the lead at will.

In the last period, State outplayed Pitt in every department of the game.

Whitey Bell, a former Erie, Pa., boy, tagged eight field goals for the visitors.

COLUMBIA CREWS BEGIN TRAINING

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Columbia university rowing for 1926 will be inaugurated today under the direction of the Flendons, father and son, who for years kept the naval academy crews in the foreground under collegiate eight. WILLS-LENGLEN MEETING NOT FAR OFF

AMERICAN STAR READY TO SAIL

Hopes She Can Play French Champion Several Times.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—What, to the casual eye, seemed to be a taller and, perhaps, a more robust Helen Wills than the east had previously known appeared today to take her final workout in America on the eve of her departure for abroad and the Suzanne Lenglen match, for which all the world has waited these several years. No one seemed prepared to venture whether the additional inch or so meant less speed or more endurance or neither or both.

It merely was there, to be noted for what it might be worth, if anything. Miss Wills herself was singularly uncommunicative although courteous as always. The writer neglected to ask her whether she liked spinach with her ice cream but it mattered not. She would have answered "yes" or "no," according to her conscience.

"I'm going abroad on a pleasure trip," she said by way of dismissing herself from further consideration. "If I can win tennis matches, the pleasure will be greater. If I can't I won't let it spoil my trip."

Hopes to Meet Suzanne. On the subject of Suzanne she would not betray more than polite interest by so much as a word to look or a gesture, although she did say she hoped to meet the French champion not once but several times. She said she thought a series of three matches would better determine the question of supremacy but added with a smile: "I could tell you more about that after the first match."

It is to this opening clash, by the way, that those close to the American claim she looks forward with the highest hope. It will take place on the hard courts of the Riviera, if Suzanne doesn't get housemaid's knee or something in the meantime, and critics of tennis form are agreed that Helen is at her best on this type of playing surface.

Asked about it today, she evaded a direct reply, merely stating that she was more accustomed to hard courts because of her play in California. However, tennis critics claim that she is faster afoot on clay or asphalt than she is on the turf.

It will be turf at Wimbledon and the heaviest kind, at that. But Helen thinks she will do much better there this year than she did in 1924.

Lacked Practice Last Year. "I only had a few weeks practice in England last time," she said. "This year I plan to be on the ground almost two months in advance of the championship and, if I can't win, I will simply know that it isn't in me."

Her remaining plans were vague, except that she was certain she would return early in July to get ready for the defense of her American title. The tentative schedule mapped out calls for a brief workout at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, this afternoon, her first attempt to play on indoor courts; then the business of sailing tomorrow on the De Grasse, which is due to arrive at Havre on January 15, after which she will spend a few days in Paris and proceed to Cannes.

She said she didn't know what tournaments she would enter there but hoped to play constantly. Then she bowed herself out.

Huntzinger is Bought By St. Louis Cardinals

NEW YORK.—Sale of Walter Huntzinger, pitcher, former University of Pennsylvania athlete, to the St. Louis Cardinals, was announced today by the New York Giants. Huntzinger appeared last year largely in relief roles.

Speaking of shortstops, we would like to hear from the major portion of the American and National league clubs as to why, during their mad scramble to get infielders, they permitted the Cincinnati Reds to send Jimmy Caveney to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league.

Now the report was prevalent last season that Jimmy's legs were a bit weak. If this be the only reason it is a thin one. Given the choice between a weak pair of legs and a weak brain the average manager will take the weak-legged one for a shortstop.

The Reds certainly didn't let Caveney go because of his age. For the man they got in exchange—Frank Emmer—is Jimmy's age.

Emmer's advantage over Caveney, on paper at least, is his hitting ability. But that ability is gauged only by his work on the coast. He had a trial with the Reds in 1916 and has been a minor leaguer ever since.

The Pirates have Glenn Wright, one of the greatest shortstops the game has produced in 1926 years. The Giants have the brilliant Travis Jackson. The Cleveland club has Joey Sewell. Connie Mack has Dykes, Gallows and Hale and a couple of other good men. But the other clubs are weak in the shortstopping department.

And the interesting part of it is that the Cincinnati Reds have Sam Bohne, who stacks up as better than the average shortstop, so why toss out Caveney to get simply another shortstop "hope?"

Kobe is the largest tourist port in Japan.

RISKO-FITZ PUT ON TAME BOUT

Cleveland Wins Over Son of Famous Fighter.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—Coming as an anti-climax after an unusually good boxing card at Public hall last night, Johnny Risko, Cleveland's heavyweight hope, and young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of one of the most famous fighters of all time, put on an extremely tame exhibition, the winner, according to Referee Matt Hinkle, being Risko. The decision, however, was not a popular one.

Johnny Datto, Filipino, scored a technical knockout over Tommy Noble in the sixth round of the semi-final, the referee stopping the fight when it was apparent Noble could not go on.

Tony Gitebenau, of Buffalo, fighting at 138 pounds, gave the fans a surprise by scoring a draw with Bud Gorman, weight, 199, a highly touted New Yorker.

Joey Abrams, Akron featherweight, and moxie Miller, of Cleveland, fought a well-earned draw.

er, to journey to the U. S. for a tour. Compston planned to devote all his attention this winter to perfecting his game, to the end he might win back for England the open crown next season. Then he planned to come to the U. S. in quest of more laurels. Then came his thought that the trip might be a means toward the end and he came.

Compston has been called the "white hope" of British golf. Perhaps his huge size has something to do with this sobriquet although the quality of his golf also suggests it.

Compston is a veritable giant in stature, well proportioned and (for female note) good looking.

Collegiates Protest Middleweight Champ Will Fight on Coast

NEW YORK.—The National Collegiate Athletic association will appeal to Commissioner K. M. Landis for his support to curb the practice of organized baseball in offering professional contracts to college undergraduates, Palmer Pierce, president of the body, announced yesterday.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Harry Grab, Pittsburgh, world's middleweight champion, may fight on the coast next month. He has already signed a contract with Ted Moore, England's middleweight king, for a bout Jan. 26.

FOUR FOREIGN TRACK CHAMPS TO INVADE U. S.

New Records are Expected During 1926 Campaign.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Every indication at the moment is that this season will enjoy its era of greatest prosperity, exceeding even the 1924-25 campaign when Nurmil took the country by storm. He was only one man and, for the most part, he ran only one race a night.

What, then, may be the expected reaction to an athlete who dailies with records in the pole vault, middle distance runs and broad jump? Such a man is Charley Hoff, of Norway, who will come here for the indoor season in company with Huber Houben, a great German sprinter; Adrian Paulsen, the Dutch middle distance, and George Goodwin, the English walker. The latter is the only foreign entry whose anticipated arrival can be viewed without emotion.

Co-Star With Nurmil. Hoff probably would have been the co-star with Nurmil of the last Olympic games if it hadn't been for an injured heel. He held the world's record for the pole vault at the time and afterward raised it to 13 feet 11 1/2 inches. His heel precluded participation in the vault; also in the running broad jump, in which he has bettered 24 feet.

Even handicapped as he was, he reached the finals of the great 800-metre event, but was shut out.

That's the kind of a mouth organ the American field will have to reckon with this winter. If he takes to the boards at all, he probably can beat any of our quartermilers and will sten with the best of them in the half. And even if unfamiliar conditions prevent him from vaulting to form, there is no reason to believe that he won't be able to top the world's indoor record of 13 feet.

Houben beat Paddock and Murchison several times, but little has been seen of him in international competition because of the anti-German feeling that prevailed after the war. He is an oddity of the track—a left-footed starter—and comes out of his holes as fast as any man in the game. What he will be able to do with small spikes on the boards remains to be seen, but that he will be an interesting performer is taken for granted.

In a Special Race. Paulsen's lone start in this country was a special 600-yard race at Travers Island last summer. There he ran right over our best, Heifrich, Marsters and Holden. In the stretch he won very impressively. He, too, may be handicapped indoors because of his inclination to run high.

Still, anyone with the records of Houben and Paulsen will be dangerous until they become acclimated to indoor conditions. After that, they might be unbeatable.

In any case, with four champion invaders competing almost meet for meet, it either will be the greatest indoor season in history or John L. Sullivan was a French Canadian.

Meet Two of Baseball's Handiest Performers

SYRACUSE GETS CIRCUIT STAKE

Outbids Two Rivals for $70,000 Purse Event.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—The most important action at yesterday's grand circuit meeting here was the award of the new $70,000 Hambletonian stake race for three-year-old trotters, to the New York State fair, at Syracuse. The New York organization outbid Atlanta and Kalamazoo, offering $8,000 for the event. The purse will be provided by entry fees.

Whether or not a meeting will be held at Milwaukee this year appeared problematical today, the Milwaukee organization having asked for dates during the week of August 30, for which Syracuse had put in a prior bid. Unless Milwaukee will accept other dates it seemed likely that no grand circuit meeting would be held there this year.

Atlanta has not asked for dates, but it was expected that at least one week's racing would take place there.

Canton Passers Trim Millers Jewelers Show Class Against Miller Bros.

COLUMBIANA, Jan. 5.—Columbiana's two independent basketball teams broke even in two fast games. The Central Markets at Salem defeated the Salem Tires, 30-22, a team captained by Charles Reinher, old C. H. S. star. The Tires are leading the city league and are contenders for the city championship. Burkle for the Central Markets made 16 of his team's points. Leo Harold played in Benninghoff's place.

At the Columbiana high school auditorium the Miller Bros. team met defeat at the hands of Jack Art Jewelers of Canton, probably the fastest team of that ever appeared on this floor, the score being 46-33. The passing of the visitors was the best seen here in years and their superior team work was too much for the inexperienced local team. Hawkins, usually a star, was so closely guarded that he could only make two baskets, while Thomas was held to the same number.

Youngstown Fans Indicate Preference for Headliners.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 5.—Youngstown boxing fans in 1925 were not so keen about their favorite pastime as they were in 1924, according to figures announced by Matchmaker Al Zill. Twenty bouts in 1925 brought a gross of $62,391, nearly $10,000 less than the 1924 figures.

Such bouts as Jimmy Jones-Willie Harmon, Frankie Genaro-Eddie O'Dowd, Jack Malone-Dick Evans, Al Corbett-Rosie Story offered evidence that the fans patronized the sport to better advantage when boys in the upper rows of 12th circles were given the preference over principals striving for recognition.

Jones and Harmon attracted the most customers and the largest receipts, which totalled $5,777.

You Know Knute: Here's the Man Who Taught Him

Everyone knows the lower face of the two above. It's that of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's football wizard. But the man at the top may not be so well known to present day grid fans. He's Jess C. Harper, who coached Notre Dame when Rockne was a player there and taught Rockne the game. Harper's a prominent Kansas cattleman now and Rockne's visiting him.

John Sand, Philadelphia, made the most puts, 352, and committed the most errors, 60. Glenn Wright, Pittsburgh, had the most assists, 530, the greatest number of total chances, 924, and engaged in the most double plays, 169.

Charles Hartnett, Chicago, had the most puts, 409, most assists, 114, most errors, 23, most total chances, 546, and tied with Earl Smith, Pittsburgh, for taking part in the most double plays, 15 each. James Wilson, Philadelphia; Eugene Hargrave, Cincinnati; Earl Smith, Pittsburgh; and James Taylor, Brooklyn, are in a tie for the most passed balls.

Sixteen pitchers returned perfect averages in their fielding efforts. The honor of leading fielding pitcher belongs to Clarence Mitchell, by virtue of his having accepted the most chances, 75, without error. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, had the most puts, 18, most assists, 92, most total chances, 117, engaged in the most double plays, 11, and with Adolfo Luque, Cincinnati, is tied for the most errors, 7 each.
